WHAT HAVE THEY GOT TO HIDE?

CHANDLER POLITELY HANDS LIE BACK TO ROOSEVELT

EACH CALLS THE OTHER LIAR.

He said that he had been much troubled by the advocacy of an unlimited court review by some of the lawyers of the Senate—naming Senators Knox, Spooner and Foraker—as trying to injure or defeat the bill by ingenious constitutional arguments, but that he had come to a complete disagreement made this point emphatic aid that

PRESIDENT IS NOW FLATLY CONTRADICTED

Bailey Stirs Up Tillman Again by Quoting Article Which the Texan Senator Attributed to the Inspiration of the President.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Senator Tillman this afternoon received and made public a letter from Ex-Senator Chandler in reply to the President's charge that Chandler had uttered a "deliberate and unqualified falsehood" in regard to the recent conferences at the White House. The letter says in part:

"My Dear Mr. Tillman: As the telephonic denial by President Roosevelt sent to the Senate through Senator Lodge remains in the Congressional Record of May 12, it seems to me that I should take some notice of it, which I do by now reaffirming the essential truth of the statement I made to you and which you repeated in the Senate.

"Much as I regret that the hasty action of Senator Lodge and the President has forced an issue between the President and myself, the extreme language he used makes such issue unavoidable, and I cannot shrink from or evade it, although I cannot use toward the Chief Executive of the nation language like his own. Upon our respective statements I submit the controversy with confidence to the judgment of those who know me.

"For those who do not know me there is, fortunately, circumstantial evidence of a high order which shows that the President could not have omitted to make, in substance, the statement which he denies.

PRESIDENT IN ERROR.

"Nor could he have then made the whole statement which he now substitutes. His impulsiveness has led him into serious error upon a point of no importance in itself, but only as affecting his attack upon me. I give to you a further statement as follows:

"Prior to March 31 I had not seen the President for a long time. I did not go to the White House as a representative of Senator Tillman, but wholly because the President summoned me there by a letter from Mr. Loeb, and I waited for him to express his object. It was unmistakably stated to be communication with Mr. Tillman, who had the rate bill in charge, and other Democrats of the Senate, for the purpose of securing the adoption in the railroad rate bill of a court review clause limiting the inquiry to the question whether the commission had exceeded its authority or had violated the constitutional rights of the carrier.

"I knew and he knew, that it was impossible for him to open conferences with Mr. Tillman unless Mr. Tillman was fully satisfied that the President had absolutely given up all intention of coming to an agreement with the Senators who had been making the contest for an unlimited court review, and in stating his object he said that he had parted from them finally, naming Senators Knox, Foraker and Spooner as the Senators who had made the arguments in the Senate to sustain that view, and he used as nearly as I can recollect the language given in my statement repeated by Mr. Tillman.

TILLMAN DISTRUSTFUL

"When, an hour later, I visited Mr. Tillman and told my mission from the President I found him distrustful and suspicious. He questioned me closely as to what the President had said, and I related to him as accurately as I could the statement made by the President to me and I convinced him that the President had ceased to hope for compromise with the Senators named and the other advocates of an unlimited court review. When satisfied that this was the case he readily consented to co-operate with the President.

"Consider the statement which the President says he thinks he made instead of the one narrated by me. Senator Foraker, he says, was not mentioned. I am quite sure he is mistaken. Senators Knox and Spooner, he says, were mentioned, but that all that was said about them was, as to Senator Knox, that the President did not agree with a portion of his proposed amendment, and as to Senator Spooner that his name was only mentioned by him to express a cordial approval of Senator Spooner's amendments. If the President had on that night told me that he cordially approved of it and I had so reported to Mr. Tillman, there would have ensued no conferences looking to co-operation. . . .

The only harm that I can see that has come in the whole business was the abandonment of the attempt to carry the limitation of the review, without previous notice to Senators Tillman and Bailey.

"On the whole, perhaps I ought to consider myself fortunate. If the old imperialist days had been fully revived at the White House, one whom I considered the best of my friends, Senator Lodge, upon demand, would have cut off my head and taken it to President Roosevelt on a charger and I should have spoken no more. Now at least I have left to me the power of speech. But I shall never use it again as a missionary from President Roosevelt to the Democratic party.

"Sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM E. CHANDLER."

Shortly after the receipt of the above letter Senator Tillman sent it to the desk and had it read by the clerk of the Senate.

"LIAR," SAYS BAILEY.

Senator Bailey sent to the desk the publication in a Western newspaper declaring that he was secretly opposed to railroad rate legislation, and it was read. He declared that the dispatch was sent out by a correspondent close to the White House. He denounced the statement as an unqualified, malicious and deliberate lie. He denounced the correspondent in the same terms, and the man who gave him the information as an unqualified, malicious and deliberate liar, "no matter how high his station or what office he holds."

Mr. Bailey then resumed his seat.

Mr. Tillman jumped to the floor. He wanted the entire story read, Mr. Bailey having only called attention to that portion relating to himself. This was done. During its reading Mr. Tillman's face was a study. The predominating characteristic was the blood red color, for the news story which the clerk read in distinct tones held the South Carolinian up to scorn and ridicule as a Senator, who, by stealth, sought indirectly an interview with the President, who several years ago withdrew from Mr. Tillman a dinner invitation.

The story further charged Bailey with having been the real stumbling block in the way of the Presidential negotiations on the rate bill; of having been under suspicion by Mr. Tillman and other Democratic Senators, and of having tried to betray the advocates of the railway bill, all of which, the story said, was susceptible of documentary proof.

"Eight Distinct Lies."

Senator Tillman, continuing, said that in

OFFERS TO PROVE THAT GRAND JURY VOTED TO INDICT GETHRO

Attorney Auerbach Has Bond in Representative's Libel Suit Reduced From $200,000 to $10,000.

SUMMONS OFFICIALS WITH THE GRAND JURY RECORDS

Representative Frank J. Gethro of Boston has brought suit against the BOSTON AMERICAN for alleged libel, claiming that in a news report in last Tuesday's AMERICAN regarding the bribery investigation by the Grand Jury it was intimated falsely that the Grand Jury had voted to indict him.

Mr. Gethro's attorney asked that the BOSTON AMERICAN should be compelled to furnish bonds in the sum of $200,000. Attorney Junius T. Auerbach, counsel for the BOSTON AMERICAN, appeared before Judge Lawton, in the motion sessions of the Superior Court, today, to ask that the bond be reduced, on the ground that so large a sum as $200,000 would be unnecessary and oppressive.

Judge Lawton listened to the arguments of Attorney Auerbach and Attorney Daniel W. Coakley, who appeared as Mr. Gethro's lawyer, and then carefully read the news articles in which Mr. Gethro declares he has been libelled. After asking a number of questions of the lawyers the judge smiled and reduced the bond to $10,000.

Says Grand Jury Voted to Indict.

Mr. Auerbach, in his argument to have the bond reduced, offered to prove through the clerk of the Grand Jury, whom he had summoned, and through the clerk of the court in possession of the Grand Jury records that witnesses before the Grand Jury had testified that Mr. Gethro had offered bribes to members of the Legislature.

Mr. Auerbach offered to prove that the Grand Jury had voted to indict Gethro at this month's term. He stated that the fact that the Grand Jury "illegally saw fit to reconsider or to postpone indefinitely the return of such an indictment" did not change the truth of the allegation made by the defendant.

He said he would not argue whether any undue journalistic zeal had been used in publishing the story of the indictment, but that whether this was so or not, it had been done in good faith, and from proper motives and in the public interest; and that the showing up of large criminals was more important than the prosecution of small ones.

Suit Brought for Intimidation?

He declared that his client thought it was carrying out and assisting in the operation of justice when it published the item complained of, that the amount sued for constituted a gross oppression upon the defendant, was an abuse of process, and was not done in good faith or from proper motives, but with an intent to intimidate the grand jury or the district attorney, and to lull suspicion in view of the approaching hearing at the State House.

Mr. Auerbach also mentioned the fact that no politician ever recovered a verdict for substantial damages against a newspaper in Massachusetts, and that juries believed in the reasonable freedom of the press. He said that in the history of the Commonwealth there were no verdicts for libel, with one exception, which had been sustained for any sum more than $5,000, and in all of those cases express malice or lack of truth or improper motives on the part of the defendant were proved.

TROLLEY MEN DECIDE TO STRIKE IF THEIR DEMANDS ARE REFUSED

NATIONAL PRESIDENT MAHON IS TO CONFER WITH PRESIDENT SULLIVAN TO-MORROW.

The 8,000 employes of the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railways will strike unless the management grants their demand for a shorter workday and an increase in pay.

This was decided to-day at a meeting at Hotel Rexford of the delegates of the thirteen divisions of the railways. Far more than two-thirds of the members of the union voted to fight the decision of President P. F. Sullivan of the companies.

The conference committee representing the employes met President Patrick F. Sullivan of the Old Colony system in his office shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon, and by agreement, an hour was set for to-morrow when the conference committee and officials representing the road will meet in a final effort to adjust the existing difficulties. If the railways refuse to accede to the demands of the men, a strike will be ordered at once.

President Mahon gave out this statement after the meeting at Hotel Rexford:

"The committee representing thirteen divisions of our association covering the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railways met to-day and delivered the votes of their respective divisions as to the attitude of the organizations concerning President Sullivan's answer and the organization's future policy.

Over Two-thirds for Strike.

"The count of the vote shows that the companies' position and answer is voted down by an overwhelming majority, and the demands of the men, as submitted in the agreement to the company, have been endorsed and the committee instructed to again open negotiations with the companies and request their adoption of the same.

"This proposition of the committee has been endorsed by a strike vote far in excess of two-thirds of the membership, as required by the international constitution. The committee will attempt to open negotiations with the company this afternoon. Until we learn of the result of the efforts of the committee I have nothing further to give out."

Earlier in the day President Mahon said:

"There will be a strike on the Boston & Northern and Old Colony street railways, unless the management of these roads recede from their present attitude toward the men.

"The wages of employes on these roads have been at a standstill for the past seven or eight years, while the cost of living in that period has increased nearly 50 per cent. It is time to give the men better conditions and higher wages.

"Under the present rules of the companies the conductors and motormen have to serve ten years' apprenticeship, despite the fact that the men are capable after they have worked three or four months for the companies."

"How about Farley, the strike breaker? It is understood he is in Boston with a lot of picked men to fight the unions in case of a strike. Do you fear him?" was asked.

SAYS FARLEY IS DEAD.

"Farley is dead, I understand. He died of consumption in New Orleans a few months ago, according to reliable information I have received. If anyone has been in Boston and posed as Farley he is pretending to be the man, that's all.

"If there is a strike we will not fear any strike breakers the management of the street railway companies may import. We will have the situation well in control."

A dispatch to the BOSTON AMERICAN from New York says that Farley is not dead. He left there two days ago, and at his office they would not tell where he is.

President Sullivan, in talking to-day of the strike situation, said:

"The union has made no proposition to me, and I cannot make any answer to it until they do. These are exciting times. The less said the better.

UNCHANGED, SAYS SULLIVAN.

"The company has made no change

LETTER TO CAESAR ABOUT CHRIST VIVIDLY DESCRIBES THE SAVIOUR

DESCRIPTION OF CHRIST BY AN EYE WITNESS.

From a letter written by Publius Centullus of the Court of Pontius Pilate to Tiberius Caesar during the lifetime of Christ.

A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with very reverend countenance, such as beholder may both love and fear.

"His hair was of the color of a chestnut, full ripe, plain to his ears, whence downward it is more Orient and curling, and waving about his shoulders. In the midst of his head is a seam, or partition in his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites. His forehead, plain and very delicate. His face, without a spot or wrinkle, is beautiful with a lovely red.

"His nose and mouth so formed that nothing can be reprehended. His beard thickish in color, like his hair, not very long, but forked. His look innocent and mature; his eyes gray, clear and quick. In reproving he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous and fair spoken; pleasant in conversation, mixed with gravity.

Eye Witness Tells How He Looked and the Color of His Hair and Eyes.

Testifies to His Miracles and How He was Regarded by Public and Followers.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The first description of the Saviour believed to be authentic which the world has ever had has just been found.

It appears to be an authentic copy of the original letter by Publius Centullus to Tiberius Caesar, at Rome, telling of the appearance and of the ministry of the Saviour.

Because it differs from cabled reports of the contents of the original letter it is all the more interesting. The copy of the letter of Centullus has been found in the library of M. W. Dillon, who has an office at No. 200 Broadway, New York.

Copy Made in Rome.

Mr. Dillon received this copy of the famous letter from his father, to whom it was given by Archbishop Lord Kelly of Laum, Ireland. Many years ago Lord Kelly copied the letter from the original in Rome. Correctly translated the letter reads:

"There appeared in these days a man of great virtue, named Jesus Christ, who is yet living amongst us, and by the Gentiles is accepted as a prophet of truth, but his own disciples call him the Son of God. He raises the dead and cureth all manner of diseases. A man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with very reverend countenance, such as the beholder may both love and fear.

Hair Chestnut in Color.

"His hair of the color of a chestnut, full ripe, plain to his ears, whence downward it is more Orient and curling, and waving about his shoulders. In the midst of his head is a seam, or portion in his hair, after the manner of the Nazarites. His forehead plain and very delicate. His face, without spot or wrinkle, is beautiful with a lovely red.

"His nose and mouth so formed that nothing can be reprehended. His beard thickish in color, like his hair, not very long, but forked. His look innocent and mature; his eyes gray, clear and quick. In reproving he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous and fair spoken; pleasant in conversation, mixed with gravity.

"It cannot be remembered that any have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep. In proportion of body most excellent. His hands and arms most delicate to behold. In speaking, very temperate, modest and wise. A man for his singular beauty surpassing the children of men.'

TROLLEY MEN VOTE IN FAVOR OF STRIKE

since the statement of last week, and that refusal to the demands of the men still holds."

President Sullivan has told the men that the demand for a nine-hour day is unjust and will not be granted. He declares that the uniform rate of twenty-eight cents an hour asked for will not be granted; that the road cannot afford it, as it would make an increase yearly of over $225,000. As regards the unionizing of all employes, President Sullivan told the men that the company does not and will not discriminate between union and non-union men.

DEMANDS OF THE MEN.

The men want nine hours in eleven to constitute a day's work, and twenty-eight cents an hour flat as the rate of pay. They also insist on the privilege of unionizing all of the men.

Should a strike be declared it would prove a hard blow to the railways at this particular time, when the shore and country resorts are opening their seasons. to-day made this statement:

The threatened strike is well planned. It has been under way for three years, and is the first attempt of the national body to force an issue in New England. It will cripple the roads in the only season of the year when a profit is made.

The votes of the various unions so far control the situation that the dissenters are small in minority and amount to little. Brockton has voted for strike, 350 to 4. Quincy men voted 201 to 11; Taunton, 77 to 12, and Chelsea, the only dissenting one, 55 against and 25 for.

MANY SECRET VOTES.

Fall River, Lynn, Haverhill, Lowell, Salem, the New Bedford section, and several smaller branches of the union, have voted, but decline to give out figures, stating only that in each case the majority is in favor of strike if the demands are again refused.

In some unions the poll has not been completed.

"FARLEY NOT HIRED."

Officials of the road say that it is impossible to grant the requests now, and in case the articles are changed to demands the company's position cannot be materially changed. President Sullivan said last night: "The story that James M. Farley of New York, the famous strike breaker, has been engaged to put down any possible disturbance is not so. I have had no correspondence with him. The monthly meeting of the directors will be held this afternoon, but I do not think that any action will be taken on the impending matter."

One of the leaders in the Quincy union last night made this statement:

"The fact that a large majority of the men have voted in favor of the agreement does not mean that they are in favor of a strike. It simply means that they are in favor of securing another conference with President Sullivan and the other officials of the company.

MAY GET ARBITRATION.

"If this should be refused an attempt will be made to have the Board of Arbitration pass upon the wage schedule, and if this move should fail a strike may be ordered; but no strike will be called until all other means are exhausted.

"There seems to be a doubt in the minds of the public, owing to the fact that President Sullivan referred in his open letter to that part of the men's grievances affecting the wage schedule. That was the last of twenty-one propositions submitted, and President Sullivan ignored all except the wage schedule.

"The proposed conference which the men are desirous of bringing about is for the purpose of securing some official declaration on the other propositions."

BIG CLOTHING SALE.

The Spot Cash Clothing Company, which disposes of the surplus stock of the big men's clothing manufacturers, are having a sale in Boston at their depot, 65 Hanover street, Boston, opposite the American House. Their sale is rather startling as to big bargains. Since they have Carte Blanche from the manufacturers to sell out all the stock regardless of price, they are presenting some rather astounding bargains. In fact, clothing is practically given away. A sale of this sort, of course, does not last long and it will be well if you need clothes to jump in quick and buy them. You can buy $20 or $25 suits and French back overcoats for $4.95 up, and $3.00 union made Derby Hats for 98c. For those who are able to get in town this is a mighty good opportunity to lay in a supply of clothing at an unusual bargain.

FATHER CLARK BURIAL FRIDAY

The funeral of the Rev. Michael Clark, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, who died at Carney Hospital yesterday afternoon, will be held from the church at 10 o'clock Friday morning. The place of burial has not been decided. The body will lie in state at the church to-night.

Father Clark had been pastor of the Sacred Heart Church for twenty-two years and had served in East Boston for thirty-five years. He was ordained in 1872.

BORGES URGED YOUNG PEOPLE TO SAVE MONEY

"Write a little reading notice for the newspapers—an exhortation to young men and young women to be prudent and lay by their savings so that they will not come to want in their old age," wrote Ferdinand E. Borges, the Ubero Plantation Company promoter, in August, 1900, to Julian Picazo, a New York advertising agent, who was handling the advertising campaign preliminary to the placing of the Ubero stock upon the market.

This and several other letters between Borges and his advertising agent were read by Attorney Frederic H. Chase, who is prosecuting the case for the government, at the opening of the third day of Borges' trial in the Superior Criminal Court, before Judge White to-day. In all these letters Borges not only showed marked skill as a correspondent, but exhibited great versatility of suggestion as to the kind of advertising required to impress the public.

"Make a particular appeal to working men to take care of their money," wrote Borges in one of these letters, and in another he complained that an advertisement written by Picaza sounded "too faky." "Impress the public that ours is a company with a record, not with a prospective," he wrote another letter. Speaking of the arrangement by which the Old Colony Trust Company was to act as trustee of the deed of the property of the Ubero Plantation Company in Mexico, Borges wrote:

"Our arrangement with them is a cold-blooded proposition. They understand that we pay for the use of their name. The arrangement is but a slim excuse for the trust."

In a letter which Mr. Chase read, written by Borges's partner, former Congressman William D. Owen of Indiana, the latter highly approved of the suggestion of Borges that they expend $400 or $500 to gain the good will of the employes of the Old Colony and International Trust Companies. Borges thought by this expenditure it could be so arranged that investors making inquiries of the clerks who handled the Ubero stock at the trust companies would receive roseate information as to the standing and prospects of the Ubero company.

Daniel B. Cary of the office of T. Dennie Boardman & Son, real estate agents, was the only witness to testify up to the noon hour. His testimony related to the lease of second floor of the Fiske Building, No. 89 State street, by Borges, as offices for the Ubero company. The rental fixed in the lease was $5,050 for a term of two years.

REPUBLICANS STILL AGAINST SEWER LOAN

Neither the suspension of 400 men from the sewer department nor the more recent dropping of seventy-five teams from the street department appear to have moved the hearts of the Republican members of the Board of Aldermen who have so far held up the sewer and street department loans. The six men declare that they will not support the sewer loan of $1,000,000 and that no suspensions or threats of suspensions will cause them to do so.

Alderman Draper, chairman of the board, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day: "I think this suspending of men for the purpose of influencing the action of our board is mighty poor politics, as it is evident that it is the purpose of the Mayor to intimidate if possible by his action. We Republicans cannot discharge men in the departments and I don't know that it is any of my business what the Mayor does about it.

"Members of our board disagree, and honestly disagree, with the Mayor regarding the sewer loan. If he wanted half the sum he asks for in the loan I think it would go through easily. Regarding the street improvement loan, I think there are eleven members of the board who favor the appropriation of $500,000 for street improvements, but some of them may not agree that it should be raised by a loan. I know, for instance, that Alderman Bangs believes that street improvement money should come out of the tax levy, as he considers street improvement work current expense and does not believe that money should be borrowed to pay such bills."

Alderman Bell was emphatic in his declaration that he would not support the $1,000,000 sewer loan, and that the street improvement money should come out of the tax levy. "If the Mayor will send in a proposition to raise $500,000 from the tax levy I will be glad to vote for it, and will be glad to have the Mayor know that fact. So far as the sewer loan is concerned, I will not vote for it, and the Mayor cannot drive me to do it by any political dodge or cry that I am false to my promises and am keeping poor men out of work. If, however, the Mayor will make the loan $500,000 I will vote for that amount. I don't believe that our board will appropriate more than that sum, and the Mayor may as well understand that we shall fight him to the end."

It seems to be conceded that little can be gained by the extra session to-morrow unless a trade is made, and that seems hardly likely from the present attitude of the Republican members of the board.

LEGISLATURE.

SET ON 12 O'CLOCK BILL.

The Republican members of the Senate are determined to pass the new 12 o'clock bill along and thereby repeal the old bill, so that a decision of the Supreme Court to the effect that the old bill had become a law would make no difference, and the Governor would win, anyway, on the midnight liquor selling proposition for Boston.

CLARK CAUGHT NAPPING.

Representative Clark of Brockton was caught napping yesterday. He was opposed to the bill that would curb the monopoly of the United Shoe Machinery Company. When the House took a recess he was in the middle of his speech against the bill. When the afternoon session resumed he forgot to move an amendment he had suggested and the bill was passed up to the Senate before he realized it.

TO BRING UP GAS BILL AGAIN.

It is likely that Senator Clark will try to reconsider to-day the vote of yesterday whereby the general bill allowing gas companies to increase their capital stock was defeated. If he does he will simply give Senator Cassidy another chance to arraign him for his treatment of members of the committee on public lighting who disagree with him.

JOSEPHINE TERRANOVA CALM AS SHE FACES TRIAL FOR DUAL MURDER

HAWTHORNE'S STUDY OF NEW YORK GIRL SLAYER

O'BRIEN PHOTO

"I have no regrets. I am glad I killed my wicked uncle." "I thought there was nothing wrong because Cornetta was my aunt and godmother." "Did I love Giuseppe? I cannot tell. I love him now, I know." "The devil is your best friend," said my aunt. "I can't begin to tell how sad that made me."

STRIKING PHOTOGRAPHS OF JOSEPHINE TERRANOVA, ACCUSED OF SLAYING UNCLE AND AUNT

Twelfth Juror Selected To-day Completes Panel Made Up of Married Men With Daughters—Husband Who Scorned Pretty Child-Wife Returns to Comfort Her.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The twelfth and last juror from the long list of talesmen was selected today, and with the jury complete the State's case against Josephine Terranova, who killed her aunt and uncle to avenge her honor, was presented by Assistant District Attorney Ely. Belief that she had made her atonement in the double killing made the girl calm and almost indifferent to the coming ordeal, the recital of her life's revolting story of degradation, and the stabbing of her aunt and uncle with a knife.

The jurors selected are all married men and have had daughters, and it is because of this fact that Josephine hopes to obtain her freedom, feeling that her story of outraged girlhood, told in her simple way on the witness stand, will move these men to reach a verdict of justifiable homicide or believe that her wrongs were sufficient to cause a temporary case of insanity.

In her husband, Guiseppe Terranova, he who left his wife three days after their marriage when she told him of the life she had been made to lead, was in court. He has forgiven his wife and declares that she did the right thing in doing away with her seducers. Josephine is anxious to go back to her husband, who will welcome her home again and continue the interrupted honeymoon.

Call Husband as Witness.

Terranova has been called as a witness by the State and the husband will be questioned to bring out the fact that the seventeen-year-old child-wife acted with deliberation in murdering her uncle and his wife.

Josephine's mother, Theresa Polaro, and her little sister, Rosino Pollaro, and her married sister, Caterina Giargiana, in fact, the whole Pollaro family, were in court. Josephine smiled and nodded to her mother, an aged woman, pinched by years and much suffering.

John F. Gibbons, a handkerchief manufacturer, was selected as the twelfth juror. Gibbons has four children, and Josephine seemed anxious to have him act.

The youngest member of the jury is forty-two, and the oldest is sixty-nine years of age.

Recites Girl's Crime.

Assistant District Attorney Ely, in opening the case for the State, said that he realized that the case would tax the strength of the jury because the defendant was a seventeen-year-old girl. But the defendant had committed the greatest of crimes, and the jurymen must do their duty without fear or favor.

Mr. Ely recited, without any flavor of the dramatic, the story of the girl's crime; how she left her home in Brooklyn, came to this city, purchased a knife and revolver, and then went to the Bronx, eighteen miles from her home, and seeking out her aunt, killed her in her house.

HAWTHORNE ON TERRANOVA JURY

BY JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

SELECTION of a jury in a murder case is a thing of importance always, but never more so than in such a case as this. For here the deed is admitted beforehand and the difficult question of motive or incitement becomes paramount. This question however appears more complicated still when we remember the extraordinary conditions which surrounded the defendant.

From a child undeveloped and ignorant in mind and moral nature, she was forced suddenly and by terrible events into womanhood.

She was of a race alien to ours in blood, temperament, traditions and associations, and this hereditary quality was enhanced by the facts of her youth, and of her personal seclusion even from the narrow world to which she might under normal circumstances have had access.

If we add to all this the claim made in her behalf of insanity in prior generations of her family—a claim substantiated by the consideration that, in her native environment, where a comparatively small group of persons had been dwelling for centuries, there must inevitably have occurred a great deal of in-breeding—we find a situation which the ordinary type even of intelligent jurymen might find it awkward to handle competently.

Highly Sympathetic Counsel

Mr. Palmieri, counsel for the defendant, is plainly appreciative of these conditions, and his scrutiny of the men who are to hold her life in their hands is correspondingly searching. Fortunately for her, moreover, Mr. Palmieri is equipped with some faculties in addition to such as furnish forth the everyday lawyer. Whether or not he be American born, he has a brain and a nature largely colored by Italian qualities.

In these ancient races nature has learned to do her work compactly and finely: under a quiet and unruffled surface lie smoothly disposed capacities not readily fathomed; an oiled and nicely adjusted mechanism, we might say, works effectively without outward jar or visible effort—does well the work of routine, while leaving the higher powers of mind and soul to deal with matters in their sphere.

Mr. Palmieri, confronting a possible juryman, asks him the common questions in a courteous, undemonstrative manner, and takes due note of the replies. But, all the time, we are aware of a far deeper and more subtle examination proceeding beneath the surface: he is awake to the significance of his interlocutor's manner, his look, the tones of his voice, his unconscious movements, and other nameless manifestations which betray character, training and disposition. He is probing the very spirit of the man, carrying in his head all the probable developments of the case, and comparing them with the attitude toward them which the juryman would be likely to take. He deeply meditates while he speaks, and as one man after another comes before him, he gives special emphasis to such questions as seem most apt to touch his questionable spot. . . . .

With one juror he dwells upon his power of resistance against fatigue and tedium; he tests another in regard to his independence of spirit; still another is examined as to his emancipation from prejudice. Should any reply prove obviously unsatisfactory, he challenges the talesman forthwith; but more often, after the inquisition is over, he sits down by his client, and, no doubt, puts the question to her, "Do you like this man?" Then Josephine shakes her head; or she nods it; or she asks perhaps, "Has he a sister?" and her verdict is always final for acceptance.

The young woman, who apparently does not understand much, if any, of the dialogue that has passed, has been all the while conducting an inquisition of her own. She never hesitates, when the moment for choice comes, in either her acceptance or refusal. When she refuses, she does not again look at the man; but when she accepts him, she lets her eyes rest upon him for a moment with a peculiar, soft smile, which I can compare only with the look of a woman saying "Yes" to a favored suitor. For her knowledge of men, intense though it has been, has been to the last degree limited; and she can perhaps recognize no degrees intermediate between love and enmity.

It has several times happened that a man whom she had accepted was promptly and peremptorily challenged by the prosecution, seemingly upon the sole but sufficient ground that he suited Signora Terranova rather too well.

Rejects Smiling Talesman

In one case, the talesman, who was not far one or the other side of thirty, happened to smile in the defendant's direction just as his examination had concluded, satisfactorily to her, and before the smile could vanish from his lips, Mr. Ely had jumped to his feet and challenged him, and he was thrust forth into the outer darkness.

But the jury, so far as chosen, reflects great credit on the discernment of the defence. And it must be said, on behalf of the prosecutor, who is not likely to win the sympathies of the audience by doing his duty, as he unquestionably will, that his chief desire seems to be to select men of intelligence, who comprehend what is required of them.

BRIGHTON MAN GETS "BLACK HAND" THREAT

Antonio Scibilia, of No. 139 Market street, Brighton, reported to the Brighton police this morning that he had received a letter signed "The Black Hand," in which his life is threatened unless he leaves his present place of abode. The letter is written in Italian, and a translation is as follows:

Boston, ——

You Dirty Cur:—

This is to notify you that it is best for you to leave your shop in the little forsaken town, else you shall be cut from ear to ear, you contemptible dog. Your sister, too, is under the ban of the black hand, and her life will be sacrificed unless you seek for parts unknown. You miserable disturber. Ten days is what we give you in order that you may escape our deadly wrath. Beware, you cur, and unless you heed our advice we shall carry out our threat to the limit.

Signed

"The Black Hand."

Mr. Scibilia declares that he is very much agitated over the receipt of the letter. He said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day:

"I cannot account for it. Why should I be marked as a victim of this treacherous gang of murderers. I have never done anyone any harm. I received the letter a few days ago, and at first I did not give it a thought. But since then I have decided to report it to the police. I never thought I had an enemy in the world. Why my sister should be included in the threat is beyond my comprehension."

Mr. Scibella has been living in Brighton for more than a year. He is twenty-eight years old and was born in the province of Messina, Italy. He has always born a good reputation among his friends and they are alarmed for his safety, unless he obeys the order of the Black Hand.

FINED $60 FOR DENYING BOOKS TO THE TOWN

SALEM, May 16.—For refusing a committee appointed in a town meeting to examine the books of the Board of Health of Swampscott, the three members of the Board were fined $20 each in the First District Court here to-day by Judge George B. Sears. They appealed.

The case was the outcome of a long controversy between the Swampscott Board of Health and the citizens of the town. One committee appointed to examine the books was refused, and the Supreme Court was appealed to. Justice Sheldon granted the committee the permission desired. When a second committee was appointed the Board of Health again refused, saying that as long as one William Stubbs was a member of the committee the books could not be examined.

The case was taken to the Salem Court. This committee had notified the Board of Health that if any irregularities were found in the books the district attorney would be appealed to.

The members of the Board of Health are Frank B. Stratton, Michael Haley, Jasper H. Stone. Edgar Townsend of the committee made the complaint.

VOTE ON RATE BILL IS EXPECTED TO-DAY

the newspaper article he had counted eight distinct falsehoods concerning himself—one to which he especially desired to call attention. That was that he had ever lost faith in the integrity, honesty and fair dealing of Mr. Bailey. He denied this emphatically, and said that he had never had the slightest suspicion of the Texas Senator.

Mr. Tillman characterized the correspondent as a "muck raker."

"What house the handle goes into, or whose hands holds the handle, I don't care to discuss," he exclaimed.

He said that the campaign of falsehoods "by the hirelings of the Republican machine is only indicative of the desperate straits some people have brought themselves into."

Mr. Tillman then submitted the Chandler statement, for the purpose, as he said of enabling the future historian to tell "who did the lying."

"Two Chief Cuckoos."

At the conclusion of the reading of the Chandler letter Senator Bailey again took the floor and announced that a similar statement to that which he had denounced (in the Chicago Tribune), he discovered, had been published in the New York Tribune this morning.

He wanted to say that among all the newspaper correspondents, most of whom were as honorable as the Senators on the floor, the two chief "cuckoos" were the correspondents of these two papers.

"Therefore," he said, "the suspicion is aroused that the story proceeded from the White House. I hope for the honor of my country that it does not proceed from the President himself."

The railroad rate bill, it was believed when the Senate met to-day, would be passed before adjournment to-night.

When the vote does come it will be almost unanimous for the passage of the bill. Senators Morgan and Pettus, of Alabama, it is understood, will vote against the entire measure on the ground that it interferes with States' rights.

This will bring to an end one of the most important discussions in the modern history of the Senate; terminate a debate which, for oratorical brilliancy, close analytical reasoning and remarkable display of legal lore, has seldom been equalled, and close a contest which threatened to disrupt the Republican party. At the same time, it will be the first great step toward putting on the statute books a law by which effective regulation of railroads and their rates may be secured, and by which the people may be protected from corporate discriminations and oppressions.

The bill as it has been framed by the Senate, puts under the control of the Interstate commerce commission, pipe lines for the transportation of oil; common carriers engaged in the transportation of passengers or property, whether wholly by railroads or partly by water; express companies and sleeping car companies. All charges for such service are to be just and reasonable. Free transportation is to be denied to all except officers and employes of roads and their families, ministers of religion or inmates of hospital or charitable institutions, or persons in direct charge of livestock.

Railroads are prohibited after May 1, 1908, from transporting any commodity manufactured, mined or produced by them, or in which they have any ownership interest. Railways are to be required to make switch connections with private side tracks, where there is sufficient business to justify them, and to furnish cars without discrimination against any shipper. All persons paying the same compensation are to be given equally good service and accommodations.

Every common carrier is required to file with the commission and keep open for public inspection schedules showing all their rates and charges for transportation between different points on their own or other routes by rail or water. These scedules are to state separately all terminal, storage or icing charges, and all special privileges or facilities granted or allowed.

No change is to be made in these published rates without thirty days' notice, and no carrier is to charge or receive a "greater or less or different compensation" than those named, nor to refund or remit in any manner whatever any part of those rates.

In time of war precedence is to be given to the transportation of troops over all other traffic. The giving or acceptance of rebates is made punishable by a fine of from $1 to $20,000, and not more than two years' imprisonment.

Complaints as to rates or practices of any carrier are to be heard by the commission, which is authorized to prescribe what is a just or reasonable rate or practice. Its order is to go into effect within 30 days and continue in force for two years. Jurisdiction is vested in the circuit courts to hear appeals from the orders of the commission, but no injunction can be issued without five days' notice and a hearing before three judges.

Annual reports are to be required from any carrier, showing its exact financial condition, the number of its employes, the amounts expended for improvements, the operating expenses, the cost and value of its property, franchises and equipments. All accounts, records and memoranda of the carriers are to be kept in a form to be prescribed by the commission and are to be always open to access of the commission which may employ special agents or examiners to inspect them. The present membership is left without change.

Millions Spent to Make Clean Beer

Cleanest Manufacturing Process Known Is That of the Leading American Brewery.

We regard beer as a food and the business of brewing beer one of our most important industries. When we tell our readers that without exception there is no other brewery in the world so absolutely clean in its process of manufacture as Pabst, we speak from exact knowledge of conditions. The monster Pabst Brewery at Milwaukee represents an outlay of millions of dollars, and many of those millions have been expended to make the Pabst exclusive process absolutely clean. Pabst Beer stands alone to-day, the only food product that from the beginning to the end of its manufacture is absolutely beyond reach of even the contaminating germs of the air.

Doctors boil their instruments in water to sterilize them. Pabst boils his brew in closed kettles and thus sterilizes it. From there it passes through sterilized pipes to sterilized hermetically sealed tanks, where it is fermented. Then through more sterilized pipes it goes to sterilized hermetically sealed storage tanks, and when bottled it is pasteurized. Throughout the entire process it never is touched by human hands and comes in contact only with sterilized air. No other food product known can show such a record of positive cleanliness.

This process of manufacture is the exclusive Pabst method. It is one reason for the "always the same, always the best" reputation of Pabst Beer.

The cleanest beer and the richest beer, Pabst Beer has no equal as a mild, refreshing, healthful beverage.

I tried everything I could think of and also everything that was advertised, but got no relief, until I was advised by a friend to try Cuticura, which I did, and can truthfully say I got immediate relief. I would gladly recommend Cuticura to any one suffering as I did with eczema, and can verify my statement by members and also intimate friends of my family. While the Cops Are on Parade, CROOKS, BE GOOD, OR ELSE SKIDDOO!

Let the Bluecoats, Unafraid, March Oblivious of You!

The annual parade of the Boston Police Department, which has been omitted for four years, takes place to-day. The general wish that all pickpockets, shoplifters, burglars and other undesirable brethren cease from troubling on this day, in order that the policemen might parade in peace, is responsible for the following appeal:

PLEASE, MR. CROOK, BE GOOD

By Morton Birge.

WON'T you please, nice Mr. Burglar, let up Wednesday afternoon.
If you feel you've got to burgle, tell yourself: "Not yet, but soon."
On this day the law, if ever, should be rigidly obeyed,
For 'tis then the Boston copper holds his annual parade.

Said Second Story Ike, "Every cop to-day is a hero," Remember the story about the feeble and Nero.

Said Yegg Keegan, "I'm not up on gentility, But I'll relieve this guy to the best of my ability."

Let the guileless counterfeiter cease for once to "shove the queer."
Let the second story worker work in any place but here.
Let the subtle flim-flam genius treat himself to this day off.
Let the yeggman try his muscle on the links in playing golf.

Just be honest for this one day, don't break any of the laws,
Sacrifice your private interests. Think how noble is the cause.
For the copper won't feel easy when he's marching through the street
If he thinks there's any ructions cutting loose upon his beat.

Said Light Fingered Pete, working at his trade, "If this was only a longer parade John D. I'd put in the shade."

Said Tony, "The cop to-day no trouble me a bit, I make a big mon and go back to sunny It."

It's the copper's grand and only chance to show how fine he looks.
All the time he's kept a-guessing by the criminals and crooks.
So be good for this day only, won't you, Mr. Bad Man, please,
And allow the poor policeman to parade the streets at ease.

EACH LIGHT COSTS BOSTON $49 TOO MUCH

L. E. W. Kimball Tells Councilmen What Municipal Ownership Would Do.

ELECTRICIANS FAVOR IT

L. E. W. Kimball, representing the permanent committee on Municipal Ownership of Electrical Workers' Union No. 103, gave the Anti-Municipal Ownership and Municipal Committee of the City Council some valuable information about gas and electricity at the session of that body last evening. Councilmen Noyes, Attwood, Curley and some of the others who are trying to get a basis for an adverse report, tried to tangle Kimball. They failed miserably.

Mr. Noyes started to make a speech about municipal ownership in Chicago being a failure, but the chairman stopped him, much to the surprise of the labor men present, who had been shut out by committee orders at the previous meeting.

Pay $49 Too Much Per Light.

Mr. Kimball declared that the city of Boston could, and should, get its electricity at $75 per light, instead of $124, as paid at present. If Mayor Fitzgerald would insist on it. Other big consumers get it for less than that, he pointed out, and the city is the largest consumer of all. Under municipal ownership, Mr. Kimball pointed out, Boston would light her streets at not more than $75 per light.

Here are a few of the facts that Mr. Kimball gave the committee:

All represent the 5000 or 6000 electrical workers of Boston and vicinity. So far as I know there is not one man employed by the members who is not in favor of this city owning an electric lighting plant. It is a conviction we have arrived at by reason of the fact that we would stand the situation in this city. Some of us have worked for as many as twenty years in Boston and as trades unionists we have had this matter driven into us pretty hard.

Struggle for Better Pay.

"For years we were obliged to work nine hours a day for as low as $2 a day, owing to the electric lighting corporations doing all in their power to give their work to unfair contractors to keep down wages as low as possible. After a long struggle we succeeded in establishing $3.60 as the wage for an eight-hour day.

"Another reason why we are interested in this matter is the exorbitant charges for electric lighting. People have little idea of the robbery by electric lighting companies in this city. Here there are consumers getting their current for one-fourth of what other consumers are paying for their current. For instance, take the lighting station in South Boston, the largest of the Edison Company, where an one-half cent per kilowatt hour electricity is generated and delivered at the switchboard. And still they charge seven cents a kilowatt hour.

"Organized labor has just grievances against private ownership by public service corporations. It can be easily figured that millions of dollars are taken annually from the citizens of Boston by these corporations which they are entitled to, and what these companies are doing is being used at the State House for the purpose of maintaining legislative assistance to defeat any measure advocated by organized labor, either for the relief of organized labor or for the welfare of the general public.

Learning How It Is Done.

"We are beginning to realize now how it is that the overtime bill, the picketing bill and any other measure advocated by organized labor or the public at large can be defeated at the State House regardless of its merits.

"Municipal ownership is not a fad with organized labor. We are not simply following the BOSTON AMERICAN or any other newspaper.

The BOSTON AMERICAN is simply giving expression to the ideas which have gradually taken root in the minds of organized labor in this city.

"I sincerely hope that the members of this committee will see it to be for the best interests of the city to have a municipal electric lighting plant. It will be for better to take the electric lighting plant over at the present time, for if we wait the corporations will place such restrictions that it will be almost impossible to take it over. It is going to come just as sure as fate, because the sentiment is growing stronger every day."

John F. Doris, another union labor man, made an interesting address that was replete with information.

WARM WEATHER NEAR AT HAND

Summer is almost here!

For the first time this Spring the Weather Bureau to-day sees no interesting cold spells between Boston and warm weather. The mild temperature welcomed this morning after the downward drop of the mercury last night is at last of a durable quality. From now on it will be warm, warmer, up until the superlative, hot.

The thermometer this morning showed 68 degrees. This is not the high water mark of the Spring, for last Sunday the temperature was 82 degrees, but the barometer holds the record to be significant because for the only time this year there are no cold wavelets hovering around the horizon.

If they indict Mrs. Bemis, the Grand Jury will indict an absolutely innocent woman. No woman was ever charged with murder who was so cruelly wronged as is this woman.—A. P. Rugg, of counsel for Mrs. Bemis.

POISON EXPERT BEFORE GRAND JURY IN CASE OF MRS. BEMIS

Professor Whitney of Harvard First Witness in Murder Investigation.

Fortune Teller Whom the Accused Woman Consulted Also to Be Called.

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, May 16.—The Grand Jury that is to decide as to the probable guilt of Mrs. Myra A. Bemis, charged with the murder by poison of John Hammond, who was employed on her "Mystery Farm," convened at 9:30 to-day and immediately began the consideration of the case.

The first witness was Professor William E. Whitney, the Harvard expert, who, it is understood, found a large quantity of morphine in the stomach of the dead man. Another of the twenty witnesses summoned is Alice Nichol, known as "Queen Alice," a fortune teller, to whom Mrs. Bemis was wont to resort to get such glimpses of the future as the woman could give her. "Queen Alice" has declared her belief in the innocence of the accused woman.

"If they indict Mrs. Bemis, the Grand Jury will indict an absolutely innocent woman," said City Solicitor Arthur P. Rugg, who is acting with Lawyer Thomas H. Sullivan as Mrs. Bemis's counsel.

"No woman was ever charged with murder who was so cruelly wronged as is this woman. I doubt whether or not the woman will be indicted. If she is indicted by the Grand Jury, I will set her free when the case comes to trial. I will conclusively prove her innocence and, mark my word, she will walk out of the court room a vindicated woman."

The police charge Mrs. Bemis with causing the death of Hammond so that she might secure $1,500 which he had in savings banks in Ware and Amherst. The woman maintains that Hammond gave her voluntarily two orders for the money in consideration of Mrs. Bemis's giving him a home until his death.

Calls Defence Witnesses.

The government have summoned witnesses who will say the woman bought morphine in large quantities and was adept in drugs. The defence will maintain that Hammond was a morphine fiend and that the poison found in his stomach by Professor Whitney of Harvard University was due to his own habits.

There have been over twenty witnesses summoned by the government. It is a peculiar fact that many of the witnesses who will appear before the Grand Jury today as government witnesses will, when the case comes to trial, be the most valuable witnesses for the defence. The fact that the State has summoned such witnesses as Bertie Bemis, the fourteen-year-old adopted son of Mrs. Bemis, and Patrick Flynn, the foreman of the farm, have caused all manner of conjectures. Just what the State can expect to get out of these acknowledged witnesses for the defence is not plain. One of Mrs. Bemis's most ardent supporters is Flynn. Flynn has repeatedly told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter that Hammond was addicted to the use of morphine. He swears that Mrs. Bemis was most loyal to Hammond and gave him the best home he ever had.

The man who is believed to be the strongest witness which the State will present to the Grand Jury is E. Avery Brewer, senior member of Brewer & Co., the wholesale druggists on Front street.

Sold Morphine Tablets.

It is known that Mrs. Bemis bought large quantities of morphine from this firm. For years the Brewer company has manufactured condition powders and horse liniment for her. Poison is one of the ingredients in both remedies. On November 27, three days before Hammond died, Mrs. Bemis bought at this store 100 morphine tablets. The government will tell the Grand Jury that it is their belief that some of this was given to Hammond by Mrs. Bemis.

Through the efforts of the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter it has been learned that Mrs. Bemis bought strychnine, morphine and a solution containing arsenic from two Barre druggists. The police had endeavored to keep this matter secret and it was not made public until printed in the BOSTON AMERICAN.

Mrs. Bemis bought poison at these places:

On November 23, three days before Hammond died, from Brewer & Co., Front street, Worcester, one hundred morphine tablets.

On June 8, 1905, from Harding Jenkins of Barre, a bottle of strychnine, which Mrs. Bemis said was to be used for killing crows.

On April 11, 1904, from Bert P. Anderson, Barre, Fowler solution, containing arsenic. On August 20, 1904, Anderson sold her twenty-five morphine tablets.

Wanted for Sickness.

When Mrs. Bemis made the last purchase, according to Anderson, she told him she was accustomed to keeping morphine in the house and wanted it for sickness.

Anderson for several years was in the employ of Brewer & Co., working in the laboratory department. While in this department he maintains he put up many bottles of horse liniment for Mrs. Bemis. Anderson says she often bought poisons from the Worcester concern.

Among those who will appear before the Grand Jury for the government are Professor Whitney of Harvard, State Detectives Peleg F. Murray and Robert Molt, Deputy Sheriff Daniel Rice of Barre, Dr. W. E. Chamberlain, medical examiner of Rutland; Chairman W. B. Spooner of the Barre Board of Health, T. H. Spooner, the undertaker who cared for Hammond's burial; Bertie Bemis, the sixteen-year-old son of Mrs. Bemis; Patrick Flynn, the foreman of "Mystery Farm"; Robert Green-wood, the seventy-four-year-old boarder, who has given Mrs. Bemis $400 to keep him for life; David Hammond, the cousin of John Hammond, who started the case by employing Attorney John F. Hurley of Boston to investigate Hammond's death; Chief Fitzgerald of the Ware police, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Tobey of Ware, who conduct a livery stable; Minnie Sargent, sister of Mrs. Bemis; Patrick Dunbar of the Ware Savings Bank, who cashed the order for $1,000 for Mrs. Bemis; Dr. Bates of Barre, who assisted in the autopsy, and W. F. Stone of Auburn.

MRS. BEMIS TRIED GET HER MEN'S LIVES INSURED, SAY POLICE

WORCESTER, May 16.—Following the discovery of a bottle of morphine which Mrs. Bemis is alleged to have bought in Worcester shortly before Hammond's death, the State police to-day assert they have discovered that Mrs. Bemis sought to have Hammond and Patrick Flynn, another of her farm hands, insure their lives in her favor.

It is reported that Flynn had his life insured, and Thomas Hillery, representing a New York company, with a branch office at No. 44 Front street, this city, is reported to have written the policy.

Flynn, it is declared, refused to agree to Mrs. Bemis's request and made his father the beneficiary instead.

MISS MARLOWE BETTER.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Miss Julia Marlowe, whose illness forced her to leave Ottawa, is at her home in New York. Her physician states that she will be able to resume her tour next week.

MRS. BEMIS, AS SHE USED TO WORK ON FARM.

HORSE SCARED BY ENGINE

Thrown from their buggy when their horse took fright at an engine, which shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, Mrs. William Gould and daughter, Miss Bertha Gould, of Everett, driving on Broadway near Revere Beach, are badly injured about the head and shoulders, and it is feared, hurt internally. The buggy was dashed against a telephone post and demolished, and the horse was seriously bruised.

The two women had driven from the boulevard at the beach onto Broadway and were waiting for a train to pass when its engine emitted a sudden blast. Instantly the horse was turned around and, maddened, plunged sharply down Broadway, the women screaming for help and making unavailable clutches at the dashing reins.

A half a mile was covered in the thrilling runaway when the horse, veering forward the curbstone, dashed itself against a telephone pole, hurling the women out, smashing the vehicle up and badly bruising itself. Mrs. and Miss Gould were taken to their home in the police ambulance.

EUROPEAN TOUR ELECTION

WEE BOYS PUT MARY BONYTHON AT THE TOP

This Ballot Counts One Vote.

HEARST'S Boston American BALLOT
EUROPEAN TOURS
GOOD FOR ONE VOTE
VOTE 1
Name..............................
School..............................
Place..............................

The Greater Boston Division of the European Tour Election changes its leading teacher again to-day, Miss Mary W. Bonython passing her rival in the old Eliot School, Mrs. Idella E. Seidls, who took first place from Miss Rachel Rosnosky of Roxbury in the heavy voting of the "Progress" contest.

Two tiny boys, George Arvedon of No. 8 Mott street and Joseph Kolodny of No. 8 Bartlett place, rushed breathlessly into European Tour Election headquarters yesterday noon and deposited a package of coupon ballots for Miss Bonython.

"We just saw by the paper that Miss Bonython was only sixty-seven votes behind Mrs. Seidls for first place," panted Arvedon, an eleven-year-old. "Here's enough to put her at the top!" he exclaimed triumphantly.

The little fellows had been racing about the streets, through cars, stores and depots, gathering coupons from readers of the BOSTON AMERICAN until they had passed the coveted sixty-seven and accumulated 242 for their favorite teacher just at the hour when the European Tour voting sheets are closed up for the day.

Miss Bonython was the only city teacher who won a "Progress Prize," taking seventh award of $25.

Miss Rosnosky Climbs a Point.

Miss Rachel Rosnosky began climbing toward the leadership she relinquished as a result of the "Progress" contest, passing to third place over Miss Anna L. Maguire of West Roxbury by scoring 6,208 votes.

Miss Mary A. Haverty passed Miss Catherine Doran in the "Shakespearian Tour" class of the Boston list. Miss Helen Galvin crowded Miss Sophia G. Thayer down and out of the winning list. Misses Mabel Collins and Lillian K. Lewis each gained one point.

There were few changes of note outside of the Greater Boston Division in the very light voting of the day.

What for "Consolation?"

The $525 in cash prizes for greatest "Progress" was mailed yesterday to the nine winners.

The "Consolation Prizes" to be offered to non-winners of European Tours will be announced not later than next Sunday. Suggestions regarding what these prizes should be are invited.

A false and absurd report has been spread in some quarters to the effect that the BOSTON AMERICAN will purchase coupons. No coupons will be bought or redeemed by the AMERICAN. The coupons are published to be voted for by our readers for some teacher. The Special Ballot feature of the European Tour Election makes the purchase of coupons a waste of money.

The best and easiest way to gain votes for a teacher's free European Tour is to order the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN in advance by the Special Ballot.

CANDIDATES AND THEIR STANDING

Following is the list of teachers having 10,000 votes or more in the European Tour Election, arranged to show which candidates stand in the position of winners of the forty prize foreign trips. Record is kept of the names and votes of all teachers still unlisted.

FACES CHARGE OF SOLICITING $8,000 FORGERY

Accused of Seeking Use of Name of Charlestown Business Man on Note.

ARREST MADE AT OFFICE

George A. Nelson, who has an office in Room 33 of the Journal Building, was before Judge Wentworth in the Municipal Criminal Court to-day, charged with soliciting another person to commit forgery for $8,000. In issuing the warrant Judge Wentworth said that it was the first case of its kind that had come before him in his twenty years' experience on the bench. Nelson asked a continuance and is held in $2,000 bond for next Wednesday.

Arthur Cotton, whom Nelson met on the Common, tells the police that yesterday Nelson asked him to sign the name of Daniel E. Kelley, a prominent Charlestown business man, to a promissory note for $8,000.

Nelson lives at No. 224 Bunker Hill street, Charlestown, and sells shares in the Revere Roller Skating Rink.

Cotton says that yesterday afternoon Nelson, a stranger to him, met him on the Common and in the course of conversation asked him if he wanted to make a little money. Cotton replied that he did, and says that Nelson then made the proposition of signing the promissory note.

Cotton arranged to meet Nelson in his office later on. They parted, Cotton going to the Court Square station and telling the police. Patrolman Leary accompanied Cotton to Nelson's office in plain clothes, being introduced to another man there as a friend. They asked to see Nelson.

Patrolman Leary believing he was recognized and that Nelson was warned, took the matter into his own hands and arrested Nelson on suspicion. He was taken to the Court Square Station, Judge Wentworth issuing a warrant for his arrest.

IN TROUBLE THROUGH DRINK AND TULIPS

Charged with drunkenness and the theft of eight tulips from the Public Garden, Arthur H. Metcalf, a student, was arraigned in the lower court yesterday. Metcalf denied that he stole the tulips on the Public Garden, and although a fine of $5 was imposed on the drunkenness charge, the case was continued.

80 CENTS ENOUGH FOR GAS, SAYS GEN. SCHAFF

COMMISSIONER DECLARES FOR LOWER PRICE AND 6 PER CENT. DIVIDEND.

That the Gas Trust could furnish gas at 80 cents and still make a fair profit and that the dividend should be fixed at 6 per cent. is the statement made by Morris Schaff, a member of the Gas Commission, in a report made to-day to the Legislature in response to an order introduced by Representative Brigham, asking for information about the cost of gas.

After the report had been made, a motion prevailed, made by Representative George L. Barnes, to lay the consideration of the sliding scale over until Friday.

The Gas Commissioners say that the time for applying the sliding scale has not yet arrived, inasmuch as proposed improvements in the management of the Boston Consolidated Company have not "made their influence felt."

The report says:

"Eliminating the effect of the sales between companies included in the consolidation, the average cost of all gas sold during the year ending June 30, 1905, was 60.30 cents.

"The figures, therefore, while showing an increase of about ten per cent. in the output, show but very little change in the cost per thousand feet for the gas delivered. The improvements in methods incidental to the consolidation of the companies have not yet made their influence felt and extensive additions, which were imperatively needed, are now under way, but not finished. When these are completed a reduction in cost may be confidently expected, although no definite statement of its amount can now be made with safety."

Schaff Gives Figures.

In his supplementary report, Commissioner Schaff said:

"In regard to dividend, I know of no reason why the legal rate of six per cent. on the stock of the Consolidated Gas Company is not fair. It is practically equivalent to ten per cent. on the stock of the consolidating companies, which, taking into account the permanency and security of the investment, and the fact that a substantial amount of their capitalized property was not and is not devoted to the supply of gas, I believe to have been enough then, and I believe it to be enough now.

"In that case the selling price would be allowing present charges for distribution and manufacture, viz.:

Distribution	24.85c
Manufacture	32.64
Dividend	26.40
	83.89c

"And if the consolidated company could make its gas as cheaply as the cost reported in its returns to the Board, 27.61c., then the selling price would eighty cents."

As it stands, the bill fixes the minimum rate of dividend the company may declare on its capital stock as 7 per cent. and the maximum price of gas that it may charge customers at ninety cents. Under the terms of the bill, the dividends of the company go skyward every time there is a drop in the selling price of the gas.

"In People's Interest."

Every gas trust attorney has told the Public Lighting Committee that the bill is one "in the interest of the people." It is not a mandatory bill, but they admit that the Boston Consolidated Gas Company would accept it, if the people's right of petition is left out.

Attorneys Louis D. Brandeis and George W. Anderson, representing a majority of the executive committee of the Public Franchise League, have forced the bill on the ground that it would take the gas business out of politics and is the best bargain that can be driven with the Trust at this time. Officials of the Public Franchise League assert that this question was never presented to the full membership for consideration, but was considered by the executive committee, variously estimated to consist of eleven, thirteen and fifteen members.

Many members of the league, dissatisfied with the action of the executive committee, and also with the action of Senator Clark, chairman of the Public Lighting Committee, who had the bill reported in a hurry, have issued a statement to the effect that it is contrary to the principles on which the Public Franchise League was founded.

Commission Against Bill.

The Gas Commission is solidly against the sliding scale on the ground that the Gas Trust of Boston has not effected the economies that it promised to make, that it has not been running long enough under the new management to determine what it can make and distribute gas for, practicing the promised economies.

Representative Thomas L. Davis of Salem has submitted an amendment that would give the people the right of petition for lower prices and better service, and Representative Sullivan has offered another that would give the people of East Boston 90-cent gas. With these two amendments the bill would meet the requirements of all parties concerned.

But the Trust will fight these amendments, as it is its game to have the bill passed in a form that denies the right of petition and gives the Gas Trust immunity from bother for ten years.

"THE GREAT AUTO CHASE."

By Thompson Peel.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Setting the Snare

CULBERSON waited impatiently while Davis leisurely opened a cigar box, carefully selected a cigar and lighted it.

"Well," asked Culberson at last.

"The important news is that Margaret Taylor is living under the protection of Ballara, the dancer."

Davis leaned back, satisfied with this preliminary. But Culberson only stared at him a little dully and yet impatiently.

"Ballara?" he inquired.

"Yes," replied Davis. "Have you ever seen her?"

"Not that I know of," replied Culberson, and cast a quizzical look at Davis. Then he inquired, rather lightly: "What it is."

Davis noted the impatience and the rather weak attempt at flippancy. He had the butterfly on a pin and he liked to see it wriggle.

"I had an interview with Ballara at her hotel, and I made a discovery," he finally said.

"And that was——?" inquired Culberson.

"That Ballara is an assumed name, and that the famous dancer is none other than—cant you guess?"

"No," answered Culberson, "Im not good at guessing. Give it up."

"Sallie Morgan of Ballarat!"

Davis tossed this bomb into Culberson's camp and waited results.

"The devil!" Culberson exclaimed. All sorts of possibilities and complications were presented to him by the news of this unwelcome fact.

"I recognized her," resumed Davis, "from a photograph you have in your possession—the one with the head thrown back and the rose between the lips."

"Well, what's the point?" asked Culberson, as he began pacing the floor. "You have something more up your sleeve or you wouldnt be telling me this."

"The curious part of the game is this," Davis went on, as if not noting the interruption. "I had a man keeping his eye on Margaret Taylor. I know for a fact that she was penniless and almost desperate. She knew no one whom she dared to go to. If she had thought of any one who might assist her I had planned to prevent it. In other words she was absolutely at my mercy."

"And what did you do?" asked Culberson, as Davis paused.

"By a strange coincidence," he continued, "as the dancer was leaving her theatre the horses of her carriage became frightened and there was a little mixup. A trick of fate put Margaret Taylor in the way to be knocked down by that carriage. The dancer got out and insisted on taking the girl to her hotel."

"Why didn't you prevent that?" asked Culberson, sarcastically.

"There were some things for which I was unprepared," admitted Davis, "and just that possibility had never entered into my calculations. However, I did what I could to mend matters. I managed to obtain an interview with the dancer—Miss Morgan."

"But that didn't get Margaret Taylor away from her, did it?" asked Culberson, sneeringly.

"Wait a minute," said Davis. "Margaret Taylor was just in the next room, cleverly protected by a screen from intruders like myself. I taxed Ballara, in a highly dramatic fashion, with being Sallie Morgan."

"Splendid!" exclaimed Culberson. "Good boy. Well, she couldn't get around that, eh?"

"Hardly," said Davis, with a smile. "I told her that I had seen her photograph in the possession of Leonard Simms."

Culberson leaped to his feet and slapped the table nervously.

"Davis, you're a fool," he said angrily.

"Yes, you always thought so," replied Davis, with aggravating good nature. "Well, the fair Ballara raved a few minutes in a most uncomplimentary way about the faithless Leonard, and I told her he went under another name in America."

"I told her," Davis went on, "that Simms, having failed in his first attempt to get 'The Green Blaze,' had made a second effort, with more success."

Mere words failed to express Culberson's rage. He glared at Davis savagely, and there was a nervous clasping and unclasping of his aristocratic fingers as if he longed to get at his throat.

"I told her," Davis said leisurely, "that you were known here as Edward West."

For several moments Culberson stared at Davis with inexpressible relief on his face, and then silently held out his hand.

"Thanks," he said. "You've a clever brain, Davis."

"I remembered my promise to help you marry Miss Taylor," he said, "and it seemed that I could put in a good word for you and earn my share of the money that will come along with her if the old man kicks the bucket—goes out."

"But Margaret Taylor and Sallie Morgan must be separated," Culberson exclaimed.

"Oh, I've a plan for that," remarked Davis easily. "The dancer has a matinee every day, and it is more than likely that Margaret Taylor will be at the hotel alone at that time. Let's see. To-morrow will do."

The next afternoon Margaret Taylor received this telegram:

"If you love me come to me at once. I will meet you Plymouth seat, South station."

The telegram was signed "Edward West."

To Be Continued To-morrow.

SENATE KILLS TAYLOR ORDER

The Senate to-day, by a strict party vote of 20 to 7, rejected the order offered by Senator Taylor of Suffolk, requesting the opinion of the Supreme Court on the status of the old 12 o'clock liquor bill.

The bill was passed and sent to the Governor, and in accordance with the executive's request, was recalled to the Senate on May 1. As it requires unanimous consent to further consider a bill that has been enacted, and as Senator Mahoney of Chicopee objected to further consideration, the president of the Senate directed the clerk of the Senate to hold the bill subject to his order.

The constitutional period the Governor may hold a bill without his signature is five days, after which time it has the force of law. It is argued by many that the old 12 o'clock bill is in force as a law.

CIVIC CONTROL IN CAMBRIDGE?

The city government of Cambridge will investigate the question of municipal lighting as a result of the agitation of the subject by the Cambridge League of Municipal Ownership Associations, of which Augustus Seaver is president.

A committee composed of aldermen and councilmen will hold a public meeting this evening at City Hall in Cambridge for a discussion of the question. The members of the Cambridge League, as well as others who are interested, will be present.

The question is to be carried to the polls in the University City this Fall.

FIGHT SLIDING SCALE TO-DAY.

The big fight on the "sliding scale" bill comes to-day. Amendments that will give the people a show and not exempt the company from bother for ten years will be offered.

FINED FOR KISS IN LYNN STREET

Special to the Boston American.

LYNN, May 16.—For kissing his sweetheart on the street, Alphonse McReady of Lynn, was fined $10 in the Police Court here this morning. McReady paid the fine and left the court room with the girl, Mary Boyden, also of Lynn, whose eyes were flashing indignantly at the judge's sentence.

Last night the couple were walking down the shadowy side of Willow street, when in a sudden burst of tenderness, McReady's arm stole about the girl's waist and he took a kiss. The lover-like stroll was rudely interrupted by Officer Hall, who had observed the action, and who arrested McReady for a misdemeanor.

RECEPTION AT NURSERY.

We use only the finest patent white flour that money can buy; the milk is analyzed daily to see that it is at least up to the government standard; the yeast is tested for strength, then every ingredient, salt, sugar and water, are weighed—nothing is guessed at—and the whole mixed in our famous patent mixer under assured positive conditions.

NANCE O'NEIL AS THE 'JEWESS'

Nance O'Neil appeared at the Hollis Street Theatre last evening in "The Jewess," by McKee Rankin and M. Ludovici, before a large audience. It was an extremely critical audience, that forced from the company their very best work. The acting was particularly good, but the performance in its other features was marked by an utter lack of attention to details that marred the picture badly. The Jewess is described by one character as a person with long, waving black hair, and Miss O'Neil comes on with short, stringy, blond hair. The "old woman" character wears modern French heel shoes that make her look ridiculous, and the scene of the abandoned hut at the edge of the forest reveals, through the window, the street of a city for a background. Again, many of the characters wear the same shoes, stockings and other parts of costumes through a peroid covering nearly six through a period covering nearly six chief thing noticeable about the performance.

Miss O'Neil will be seen in "Camille" this afternoon and in "The Jewess" tonight. The balance of the week will be given over to "Oliver Twist."

EASY TO WORK FOR UNCLE SAM

BALTIMORE, Md., May 16.—Secretary Shaw says that Government jobs are deadly to a man's ambition and capacity and that no one in the Government employ is likely to die from overwork. In an address to the four graduates of the revenue cutter service the Secretary threw ice water upon their ambition by saying:

"There is one thing about all the Government departments, and that is that you are not likely to die from overwork. I would willingly go a thousand miles to see the grave of a man who died from overwork, but I am sure I would not find that he had been in the employ of the United States Government.

"There is nothing that will take the native capacity out of a man so quickly as employment in the army and navy. If I wanted to make a preacher out of a man I would send him to West Point. It is the best school on earth.

"There is one branch of the Government service—I won't say which—where if a man has a good idea they courtmartial him. After he has suppressed ideas for two or three years no more propose themselves and he becomes a figurehead. The army and navy have lots of men whose ideas have been suppressed."

WORCESTER, Mass., May 16.—Holy Cross and Fordham met this afternoon in their annual game, and the contest was marked by all the friendly but acute rivalry that has characterized the playing of the two teams in past years. Fordham was one of the few teams to trim Holy Cross on her own grounds last season, and the desire to win of the Worcester players was greatly enhanced on that account.

The interest in the game was wide spread, and with ideal baseball weather the fans flocked from neighboring towns in record-breaking numbers.

Both teams put forth their fastest players and strongest batteries. O'Drain, the freshman twirler, who pitched a superb game against Yale, Saturday, after two Holy Cross star artists had received their quietus, was in the box today, and being a warm weather twirler was in fine fettle for the contest. Eagan, who had been pitching gilt-edge ball for Fordham, was in the box for the visitors, and warmed up in a manner furnishing excellent box work.

SIX RACES ARE CARDED FOR SPEEDWAY

For the third matinee of the Dorchester Driving Club at the Franklin Field Speedway Saturday six very interesting races have been arranged. The racing committee have declared that all the members having horses entered must be at the course ready to start promptly at 2 o'clock, so that the delay of last week will be avoided in the future.

The debut of W. J. Bates, with his pacing mare Emma E., 2.09, will be watched with interest, as it is known that she has been an eighth this Spring in 14½ seconds. This brings her into prominence as a factor in counting for championship honors against Checkers and Rondo. Fred Bellows feels certain that his mare Helgamite can down Captain Hall in their race, but A. S. Gisbee promises he will be there to see how it is done. Elsie Mack has had pretty soft picking in the previous matinees. She is liable to strike a snag Saturday in the fast trotter, India Panis. The entries:

Class A, trotting—Queen Girl, blk. m., F. L. Robbins; Nancy, b. m., J. M. Darling; Harry M., b. g., M. F. Mahar.

Class B, pacing—Sonthe, b. g., E. S. Harris; Rondo Bar, ro. g., Chase Chamberlain.

Class C, trotting—Elsie Mack, b. m., R. C. Richardson; India Panis, b. g., O. A. French.

Class D, pacing—Yellow Boy, ch. g., J. S. Rockwell; Baby Logan, ch. m., M. F. Mahar.

Class E, pacing—Captain Hall, blk. g., A. S. Gisbee; Helgamite, b. m., F. H. Bellows.

Class F, pacing—Emma E., ch. m., W. J. Bates; Pompy Lambert, ch. g., M. A. Nevins.

DARTMOUTH MET BROWN AT HANOVER

HANOVER, N. H., May 16.—Dartmouth met her old rival, Brown, today, on the oval. The weather conditions were perfect, the first real Summer day of the season. Unusual interest centred about this game, owing to the 1-0 victory which the Hanoverians won over Brown a few weeks ago at Providence.

A large crowd was in attendance to see Dartmouth repeat her success. The grand stand was full of the prominent guests. Brown came up with her full eligible squad and with all the men in good condition.

While not looking for a walk-over Brown opinion was all for winning. With Skillin the artist for the green, the confidence of the Dartmouth men was strong.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, May 16.—It will be thirteen straight to-night if the Pilgrims lose, but thirteen is such an unlucky number that the boys may refuse to be inveigled into losing today.

The Naps rolled into town on an early train and all morning were polishing up their bats at the Copley Square Hotel, where they are putting up. There's quite a delegation of them this year. In addition to the nineteen players, headed by the great Lajoie, there is Charley Somers, president of the club, Secretary Bernardt and the trainer, the distinguished Dr. Paine. Also there are Elmer Bates of the Cleveland Press and L. F. Heacock of the Cleveland News.

"Well, you caught us in a losing streak," said one of the Boston players to Lajoie, as the big fellow strode to the players' bench this afternoon, "and I suppose you won't do a think to us."

"I would rather catch on in a winning streak," answered Larry, "because if you were winning it would be about time for you to lose. But now that you have been losing it is about time for you to win. We always get in at the wrong time."

So you see some people are never satisfied.

Warm weather was served up for a change, and the turn in the thermometer seemed to put new life in the lowly Bostons. They practiced with ginger and looked like the real goods in their preliminary canter.

The change in the atmosphere also had the effect of drawing a larger crowd to the links than has been gracing the enclosure recently.

George Winter was selected by Collins to be led to slaughter. George, however, said he proposed to show the Naps a thing or two before the session ended.

Boston Manager Says All His Players Are Worried

'IT'S ALL UP TO ME'—COLLINS

BY A. H. C. MITCHELL.

To get Jimmy Collins to talk is as hard as pulling hens' teeth. This statement goes whether his team has won the world's championship or lost twelve straight.

I cornered Captain Jim at his hotel this morning and put a few leading questions to him, but the replies were laconic. He would not spread himself at all, nor would he go into any elaborate explanations of the team's poor showing.

He beat me to the first question: "What are you doing around here so early in the morning?"

"I came around to find out what's the matter with you fellows."

"Ha! Ha!" This was a fine answer, but I persisted.

"When are you going to win a game?"

"Every team in the country can win once in awhile, but we can't seem to take one."

"Are you making any efforts to strengthen your team?"

"Oh, yes."

"In what way?"

Didn't Want Barret.

"We were after Barrett, but I got a tip that his legs were all in, so I stopped negotiations."

"Any others?"

"Well, we'll get Hoey of Holy Cross. Several teams were after him. I understand he can hit some."

"Do you think your pitchers will do any better when the weather gets warmer?"

"They can't do any worse."

"How are the boys feeling?"

"They are all worried."

"Is the management interfering with you?"

"Oh, no. It's all up to me, I guess."

"Do you miss Criger?"

"I should say we did. Our catching has been very bad this year. This makes a lot of difference."

"What other men are you after to strengthen the team?"

"You can't get any that you know are any good. The other clubs won't let any good man go."

"Doesn't Graham know of any good outfielders on the Pacific coast?"

No Good Ones on Coast.

I asked him about it, but he says there isn't a real good man out there."

"Anything more to say, Jim?"

"Nothing that I can think of."

"All right. Sorry to have troubled you."

"No trouble at all."

"Good day."

"Good day."

And there you are.

BOSTON INCLUDED IN TOUR

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Boston is to be included in the Glidden tour after all. The local motorists are therefore more or less jubilant. This gives New England and Massachusetts the proper sort of consideration in the matter of national tours. To be sure the territory will be included in the tour toward its close, but as one of the motorists said, "What care we so long as we are not entirely abandoned?" Mr. A. B. Tucker, who cared for the tourists on the last trip has been appointed superintendent of the coming tour, and in a letter to the writer says the route will be as follows:

There will be two pleasure tours in July, one starting from New York, the other starting from Chicago, the objective point of both being Buffalo, N. Y., where the A. A. A. tour then really starts from. The route embraces Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Albany and Saratoga, N. Y.; then by way of Lake Champlain to Rutland and Burlington, Vt., Montreal, Three Rivers, Quebec, via Shreveport, Me., and the Rangeley Lakes to the White Mountains, Poland Springs; thence to Boston and through New England, as last year, to New York.

Many Bostonians will make the start on the trip at Buffalo, shipping their cars by freight there, while others will be content to join the tourists at Bretton Woods and make the latter part of the journey in company with the main body. It is possible that a tour, which will be a branch of the main Glidden outfit, will be started in Boston and run under the direction of Chairman Gilmore of the Bay State Association Touring Committee.

Mr. James O'Brien of this city is to be a participant in the tour and he will start from Buffalo, as will also J. S. Hathaway, F. A. Hinchcliffe, C. S. Henshaw and a few other venturesome spirits.

The Automobile Club de France has virtually declined to accept French entries for the coming Vanderbilt road race. It may be possible that the Automobile Club of America will find itself compelled to designate one of the French motor magazines to receive entries for the same. Judging from cablegrams received the French club has declined to receive entries and as no less than five manufacturers have announced their intentions of making entries it would seem as though some quick action should be taken. The makers of the Panhard, Renault, De Dietrich, Clement-Bayard and Darracq have all stated that they propose to enter one or more cars.

As but five cars can represent a country in the International, a trial must necessarily be held abroad. In case the French club declines to take charge of the matter then Le Velo will probably be designated as the custodian of the entries, and be requested to hold the trial race. In speaking about this matter yesterday a prominent officer of the Automobile Club of America said:

"The Automobile Club of America has reciprocal relations with the Automobile Club of France, and acts as agent in this country for the French club. If the latter fails to carry out its part of the agreement abroad the relations between the two will probably be severed. We cannot believe, however, that the French club has declined to accept entries of French cars for the Vanderbilt race, and are inclined to the opinion that the present apparently involved situation is due entirely to the enterprising trade rivalry of foreign automobile journals."

For the Grand Prix race over the Sarthe course, in France, on June 26 and 27, thirty-four machines have been announced. Ten French firms, two Italian and one German are represented. The French entries are as follows:

Panhard—Heath, Tesie and Tarte, drivers.

Darracq—Hemery, Wagner and Hanriot, drivers.

Brasier—Baras, Lebrun and Barillier, drivers.

Loraine-Dietrichs—Gabriel, Rougier, Duray, drivers.

Gobron—Rigolly, driver.

Renault—Sisz, Edmond Richez, drivers.

Vulpes—Barriaux, driver.

Hotchkiss—Le Blon, Salleron and Shepard, drivers.

Clement-Bayard—Clement, Villemain and La Louloncre, drivers.

Gregoire—Taveneaux and Cevelli de Bosch, drivers.

The Italian entries are:

Fiat—Lancia, Nezzaro and Weillischott, drivers.

Itala—Cagno and Fabry, drivers. Another driver to be selected.

The German entry, of course, is of three Mercedes cars, with Jenatzy, Baron de Caters and Braun, drivers.

CINCINNATI, May 16.—The Reds thought they had something easy when Tenney's Beaneaters lined up with them for the first game of the season.

The visitors, looking the worse for wear, after a few trials with the Cardinals, figured that the Reds would be just about their meat, as they stood below them in the race, and Tenney said he would make up in Redtown for the bumps he got in St. Louis.

Ed Hanlon gave the tip to his boys to do a little more hustling, as the Hub team could be measured if got at right.

He trotted out Chech to do the hurling, while Pfeffer, the college man, got his benders working for Boston.

The defeat by the Andover nine seemed to have infused new life into the Crimson players, for they gingered about the field as though they meant business.

The injury which Captain Stephenson received to his leg in the Andover game proved to be slight, and he was able to get into harness in his usual place behind the bat. The freshman Hartford was Stephenson's choice for slab duty despite the fact that he went up into the air in his last game, that against Williams. The Lafayette team was a husky-looking aggregation that gave promise of giving the Cambridge nine a hard tussle.

Five Lively Bouts at Lincoln Club To-night

It's a swell card full of local interest at the Lincoln A. C. to-night.

The main bout between Jerry Gaines and Fred Bradley of ten rounds is a puzzling problem to the sports is shown by the divergent views expressed by those who are interested in glove contests. Of course, the majority of those who have seen Gaines defeat Ferguson, Payne, Geary and Mitchell believe that the irrepressible market teamster will once again prove triumphant. In fact, it is safe to say that Gaines will rule a slight favorite over his heavier opponent when the gong clangs for the men to commence their journey.

On the Bradley side there is the greatest possible confidence. The Roxbury blacksmith has watched Gaines perform on several occasions, and he feels that he is capable of accomplishing the trick of sending Jerry to the floor for the count. Referee Maffit Flaherty will have his hands full, as the men will be together from the start until one or the other takes a trip to Dreamland.

The first bout will be put on promptly at 8 p. m., and the others will follow without delay.

The bouts are Fred O'Brien vs. Mike Grady, Al Bates vs. Frank Adams, Dutch Carr vs. Connie Mack, Young Freeman vs. Billy Connarty.

BRITT SIGNS FOR FIGHT WITH TERRY

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, May 15.—Ten rounds of fight, such as New York has not seen for years, are scheduled for Monday, May 28, at Madison Square Garden. The match was made yesterday, with Jimmy Britt and Terry McGovern as principals. The fight between these two fast little gamecocks will be interesting in itself, but the decision to fight ten rounds is even better news.

The ten-round agreement means that the pugilistic fraternity are determined to develop their sport within the bounds of the law. The private club has been an entire success, and rapid strides are being taken to put pugilism on its former popular footing.

Sympathy Is What Makes Our Lives a Heaven on Earth

By Beatrice Fairfax

SYMPATHY is what a woman most craves from man, and she rarely gets it.

She gets love and chivalry and attention, but comprehension, no.

Man bunches women as a whole. If he understands one woman he imagines he understands the entire sex.

In given circumstances he thinks he can treat Mary exactly the same as he would treat Sue.

In reality the method that would work like a charm with one might set the other's teeth on edge.

Men can't bear a woman to have "nerves," and yet she can no more help it than she can help breathing.

A man, however, instantly puts it down to hysteria, and tries to reason her out of it. He might just as well tell the earth to stop revolving.

A woman gets "nerves" when she is tired out mentally and physically.

What a man should do is to pet her a little and leave her a good deal to herself. But he should let her understand that he feels sorry for her and sympathizes with her.

That is all she wants—sympathy. The "nerves" will readjust themselves if not irritated by misunderstanding and advice.

Woman's mind is never at rest; she has a hundred schemes and plans floating through her brain.

Some of them succeed, some of them fail; over all of them she worries and fusses.

If she is unmarried it may be her sweetheart or her new costume that troubles her.

If she is married it is the baby's cold or the Spring housecleaning or her husband's delinquencies.

Having no large undertakings to worry over, the small things assume large proportions. And, anyway, it is the small worries that nag one to distraction.

When a man comes home and finds his wife or sweetheart in a nervous, irritable state of mind, ready to weep on the slightest provocation, he had better, as the old Irishman said, "sit tight."

But he must not look as though he did not care, for there's always a reason for "nerves."

With a wife it means that she has had a hard day, that everything from the range to the front door knob has gone wrong, that the children have worried her almost beyond endurance.

With a sweetheart it means that she has worked herself into a frenzy over some imaginary defection on the part of her fiance, that she is jealous and unhappy.

What both women need is petting and soothing.

Woman has got to have love and praise; she can't live without it.

When she is at the end of her endurance she doesn't want a man to say, "Oh, pshaw! Pull yourself together; there's nothing the matter with you; just look at me; if you had the worries I have there might be some excuse for acting the way you do."

What she wants him to say is, "Yes, dear, I know you have had a hard day and are tired out; I am sorry for you. What can I do to help a little and cheer you up?"

That's all she wants. Just a little sympathy, and she will come to in a surprisingly short time.

Petting and appreciation will work like magic with a tired, cross or low-spirited woman.

Try it, benedicts and bachelors, and see how smoothly the home machinery will run.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

BETTER WRITE TO HER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Seven years ago I made the acquaintance of a girl with whom I have corresponded ever since. Then for four years I saw very little of her, as I was in business. After that I was away for a year, and immediately after my return moved to another city without seeing her at all. She has also changed her residence, and we are now separated by a good many miles, and it seems as if we would never meet.

From the feeling of friendship which I first entertained for her, I have come to love her with a strong and ever-increasing love, despite the fact that I have seen her but two or three times, and then for but a few minutes during the past six years.

How can I win her love? If I could be with her, I am sure that in time I could win her for my own, but it is at present impossible for me to go to her if I am to provide for her such a home as I would like to bring her to.

I am twenty-eight, and the young lady is a few years my junior. I dislike writing my feelings to her, preferring rather to tell her with my own lips and hear my fate from hers. I feel that by delaying we would both be missing the best part of our lives together.

Can you advise me what to do?

HOPEFUL.

IF it is impossible to go and see her, you had better write and tell her of your love. If you do not, some other man will get in ahead of you. Surely you could manage to get away for a day or so. If not, I would strongly advise you to write.

AN OLD SUPERSTITION

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl twenty-one years old, and I expect to be married. Now I was told by a girl friend that if I was married in May I would rue the day. Do you think it is true? B. D.

THERE is an old superstition that it is unlucky to be married in May, but there is nothing in it. Go ahead and be married in May if you want to. No harm will come of it.

GIRLS, WATCH LITTLE THINGS

DON'T think that just because you have a stunning new hat it does not matter whether you are properly shod or gloved; whether your back comb is on straight or the little bar pins at the back of your stock are in line; that the embroidered lingerie waist for which you paid, oh, mints of money, is just a trifle soiled, and the handkerchief, filmy and lace, is mussy; the veil not precisely fresh, and the inside underskirt a wee bit ragged. Better wear last year's frock with all the small belongings correct.

* * *

One woman makes a special pilgrimage to the shops once a month for the purpose of "stocking up," and as a result she is never obliged to fall back on passe neck things or resort to borrowing from mother or sister, and she always looks well, if not expensively, dressed.

Boston women, it must be said, are singularly free from these incongruities, but nevertheless the warning note is not wholly unnecessarily.

* * *

* * *

It is as easy to buy a half-dozen ruchings as one, and so with the other things—gloves, ribbons, hairpins, hooks, thread, etc.—and it will save no end of irritation when one is suddenly called upon to dress in a hurry.

What Qualities Are Most to Be Desired in a Husband?

Dorothy Dix Says None But the Woman Who Is Married to Him Knows How Bad a Good Man Can Be

By Dorothy Dix

WHAT constitutes a model husband?

What qualities make a man most desirable as a matrimonial partner?

What are the duties of a perfect husband?

I have referred to the San Francisco gentleman who, in view of a monetary consideration, contracted to be a "model husband" and explicitly agreed to do the washing, ironing, patching, sweeping, scrub floors, clean windows and cook.

One can easily understand that a poor, tired worn out California woman's notion of a model husband would be a man who would get up in the morning and get breakfast, but this is a local idea, due to the fact that servant hire is so scarce in the far West that cooks rank along with automobiles as the perquisites of the rich.

In other places where the hired girl is one of the commonplaces of life and not a frill upon it, domesticity in a man is not rated so highly, and a woman who was sizing up the virtues of a model husband would not be inclined to give it more than ten points at the most out of a possible hundred.

Indeed, between the man who knows how to cook on a chafing dish—or thinks he does—and who insists in compounding the salad dressing at the table, and the one who knows nothing whatever about cooking, and eats what is set before him, asking no questions, for harmony's sake, the general choice would rest with the latter.

The Domestic Man

UNDOUBTEDLY there are advantages in having a domestic husband. A man who is a good provider, and who buys the groceries himself never has a kick coming about the size of the food bill.

If he picks out the meat himself at the butcher shop, he also refrains from saying things about the pin-headed intellect of a person who never finds out the difference between tenderloin and a porterhouse steak.

Likewise it is sublimely comforting to be wedded to a strong and noble being who will, upon necessity, go out and expostulate with the cook.

But there is a decided drawback to the domestic husband. No man can make a Welsh rarebit that is not murder in the first degree without being so inordinately vain of his achievement that it is an affliction to have to live in the house with him.

He is a perpetual critic of his wife's culinary efforts, and nothing she does pleases him, while as for the man who is always snooping around the kitchen, spying into the garbage cans to see if anything is wasted, and remarking on the thickness of the potato paring, he is a worse affliction than a drunkard or a loafer—and from all such, good Lord, deliver us.

No. Domesticity doesn't go for much in a model husband. Ten points is a liberal amount to allow for.

As for the moralities, undoubtedly the model husband must be moral, and yet morals do not make a good husband of themselves. Plenty of the worst husbands alive are men who never look at any woman except their wives, never drink, never smoke, go to church twice a day on Sunday and spend every cent they make on their families.

Bad Good Men

THE fact that a woman married to one of these cast-iron patterns of virtue is often peevish, unhappy and visibly discontented with her lot, while another woman, who is married to a man addicted to all the weaknesses to which flesh is heir, forgives and loves the scapegrace to the end, is continually pointed out as an illustration of a vagary of the feminine mind for which nobody can account.

In reality, it is nothing of the kind. Nobody except the woman who is married to him knows how bad a husband a good man can be.

A man may be faithful to his wife, yet never say a pleasant word to her. He may provide her with a luxurious home and Paris clothes, yet make the very bread she eats bitter with a sense of dependence.

He may be incapable of striking her a blow, yet he may keep her soul bruised black and blue with the caustic and sarcastic things he says to her.

On the other hand, a man may fall from grace half a dozen times a year, and between the falls be so adorably loving and kind, and tender, and considerate as to make his wife's spells of happiness worth the price she pays for them.

It's all right for a girl to look into a man's habits before she marries him. She can't look too long, and too hard, and with too strong a magnifying glass, but she needn't conclude that because he is a model of sobriety and morality he is going to make a model husband.

The chances are in his favor, but, in the immortal words of Bernard Shaw, "you never can tell."

Um—um—um—hum, the moralities figure out—er—er—about eight per cent. in a woman's estimate of what goes to make up a model husband.

Attentiveness

THE bill of specifications for the California model husband provides that he shall wait upon his wife at all times, when requested to do so. The provision "when requested" rather queers the desirability of the attentions. Most husbands, good, bad and indifferent, do little services for their wives when asked, but it is the having to ask that takes the bloom off of them.

The model husband is the man who never has to be asked. He is the ideal of every daughter of Eve, the man who carries the eyes, the memory and the intuitions of courtship into matrimony.

No girl has to request her sweetheart to help her on to a car, or pick up her handkerchief.

No girl has to remind the man who is trying to marry her that the 10th of September is her birthday and the 25th of December is Christmas.

No girl ever needs to tell the man who loves her what kind of candy she likes, or flowers she prefers. He is simply soaked in the knowledge of it.

These unsolicited attentions are the only kind that any able-bodied woman desires, and women put a fancy valuation on them.

Doubtless this is because they are so rare, but it is a solemn fact that a wife will be perfectly willing to work her fingers to the bone for a husband who will pull out her chair at the table for her, and that she will cheerfully take in boarders to support the one who will hold open the door for her to pass out to her labors.

Twelve points should certainly be conceded to attentiveness in the schedule of desirable qualities in a model husband. Thus we would have:

Good looks	0
Jollying	5
Money making	15
Domesticity	10
Moralities	8
Attentiveness	12
Sympathy	50

Beauty Helps for the Summer Months

THE sun and dust of Summer play havoc with many complexions, and those girls who go in for sport, who cycle and golf, and play tennis and croquet, are specially exposed to sun and wind and dust.

A little attention is all that is necessary; exercise out of doors, combined with care of the skin, all go to make a really good complexion. Many people require a reliable skin lotion which will cool and soften the skin when exposed to the sun's rays and heated by exercise.

Vaseline should be used with care, or it will irritate the skin. If vaseline is applied to the face before going out into the sunshine it will cause blisters; if, on the other hand, it be gently rubbed into the skin at bedtime it will soothe and remove any feeling of heat and irritation.

To preserve the skin the application of a little good cold cream well rubbed into it at bedtime is best. For those whose skins are very tender and easily roughened and inflamed in Summer, it is a good plan to rub cream gently into the skin; let it remain on for a few minutes, then wash off with tepid water and soap. A thin layer of the cream is left on the skin, which protects it and renders it soft and pliable.

A simple lotion, which owes its cooling properties to the spirit it contains, and which can be used to refresh and tone up the skin night and morning, is made from: Simple tinct. benzoin, 2 drachms; rose-water, 6 ounces.

Most of the face powders sold are harmless, and, providing powdering is done in moderation, it is a practice which is hardly deserving of very harsh criticism.

Freckles are not altogether unbecoming, but those who are liable to them are generally anxious to get rid of them. Ordinary buttermilk or sour milk is excellent for this purpose.

"SHADOWS OF NEW YORK"

CHAPTER XXV.—Continued

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner.

"WE want to know, sir, who the woman is in that boathouse, and your permission for us to enter," said the detective, civilly.

"Before I allow you to enter," said Herries firmly, "you must show me your authority for searching." He was talking to gain time. "The place is private property on private grounds. And I assure you there is no one there."

As John Herries made this assertion Rosamund felt her sense of contempt deepen; she believed it was a lie. Herries saw her glance, and knew what was in her thoughts. But for the present time he had to submit to be misjudged; he was powerless to defend himself or to make any explanation until the detective had gone.

The rest of Rosamund's party, Mrs. Gray, Molly and Grantham, had come up; there was surprise in their faces.

"I beg pardon, sir," said the detective, "but we distinctly saw you enter that Summer house with a female——"

Herries, whose nerves were beginning to feel the strain of the situation, interrupted the man sharply.

"Suppose you use the word 'lady' in speaking of my companion, my man. I repeat there is no one, man or woman, in the boathouse now," he said.

He touched Rosamund as if lightly on the arm—though in the pressure of his fingers she read an earnest appeal—as he added:

"Here is the lady you saw enter—Miss Wynter!"

CHAPTER XXVI.

The Answer She Gave

HERRIES hated the necessity, but he was desperate, and it seemed to him that this bold assertion was his only means of dispelling the evidently strong suspicions with which the detectives regarded him, and of getting them away.

Would Rosamund respond to his mute appeal?

He knew that she was already deeply wounded—that she believed he had lied both to her and to the police. And he was practically asking her to indorse a lie. A lie upon which tremendous issues hung—but she would not know that.

It would never occur to her, he felt sure, to associate with an escaped prisoner for whom the police were searching the woman with whom she had seen him, and his request now would only add to her anger. It would appear to Rosamund that he was simply asking her to indorse his assertion to the detectives in order to save his face before the others, Mrs. Gray and Molly.

She looked at him coldly and steadily for a moment before speaking.

Herries had been right in thinking she had no suspicion of the real facts of the case.

This woman, who was clearly on the most intimate terms with John Herries—the handsome woman she had seen kissing his hand, with a look on her face that no woman, certainly not Rosamund, could misunderstand—was so utterly unlike what her conception of a woman from jail would have been, that the thought never once crossed her mind.

She believed—as he read in her face she believed—that his anxiety for her indorsement of his words was simply from the fear lest the police search might reveal to the others the woman hiding in the boathouse. His very anxiety to conceal his assignation with this woman seemed to indicate that his relations with her were in need of concealment.

Was she to say yes? The deception seemed so useless; the police would not go till they had searched, and in the boathouse the woman would be found. But as she hesitated she saw the imploring look in his eyes, and she remembered the service he had rendered her that day.

She turned to the detective officer and said:

"Do you disbelieve Mr. Herries, or do you need my confirmation? I am the lady you saw going into the boathouse with Mr. Herries." She added, feeling that, whoever the woman was whose presence Herries was so anxious to conceal from her friends—at least her last assertion was true. "There is certainly no escaped prisoner there."

Rosamund made her assertion with a calm convincingness, but Herries saw by the look in the man's face that the detective officer was still doubtful.

Had Olga got into safety yet? He could not long withhold his permission of search from the detectives without deepening their suspicion into absolute conviction that he was conniving at the escape of a hunted woman.

"Then, Mr. Herries, if that is the case, you cannot object to our entering the—the boathouse, you say it is."

"I do object, because of your implied refusal to accept our statement," he said, speaking to gain time. Every moment that passed before they searched the boathouse made Olga's chance greater. "However, if as you assert, you are from Mulberry street——"

"One has to be businesslike in these matters, sir, and disregard hearsay, even if one believes it," said the man in professional tones.

The two men walked to the boathouse, whilst Rosamund held her breath in suspense. How useless his appeal to her had been—the woman would be discovered after all.

The detectives flung open the doors. But the boathouse was empty.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Two in a Motor

THE men passed through, went down the steps where the boat was moored, and looked out over the river. It was clearly impossible that any one could have left the place that way except by boat or swimming.

Herries had followed them. His sense of relief was intense. The water was quite tranquil and undisturbed, except for the faint ripples caused by the wind. The little inlet to which he had directed Olga was quite hidden from view where the men stood on the boathouse steps.

"Well, are you satisfied?" he asked. "No one here, is there?"

"Well, unless she has got away in a boat——"

Herries burst into a laugh.

"Why not suggest a steamer at once?" he cried.

The man from Mulberry street seemed to resent the bantering tones.

"There's one thing puzzles me, Mr. Herries," he said, looking at John closely. "It struck both of us that the woman we saw go into the boathouse with you wore a dark skirt, while the lady you assert it was happens to be wearing a light dress."

Herries maintained his composure admirably.

"I think you must be more observant about ladies' dress than I am," he said, with an assumed carelessness. "You must remember that moonlight plays tricks with colors. I need hardly tell a Mulberry street detective so elementary a fact as that, I suppose? If you have no more questions to ask, I will rejoin my friends."

But as he walked out into the open, followed by the two officers, he felt that their suspicions were only partly dispelled. The danger was not over yet—would not be over until he had got the fugitive safely in his motor, and they had left the town behind on their way to New York.

Grantham came up to him as the two plain clothes men, looking a little crestfallen, retired.

"What's all this fuss about, old man?" he asked. "We came for a row, you know. Didn't expect to find you entertaining men from Mulberry street," with a laugh.

Never So Cold

"I can't explain now," said Herries, hastily. "And—I can't give you my reasons, but I am serious when I ask you to find some excuse for taking the ladies back to the house as soon as possible," he added, with an earnestness that was not lost on Grantham.

"Rosamund," he said in a low voice, "I want to thank you for—for helping me out just now, and to say this: don't misjudge me till you know all. When I explain——"

Avoid Confusion in Preparing to Move

BEFORE deciding to move from one home to another there are many things to be considered, the foremost of these being the cost that will be entailed. So many unlooked for expenses crop up that while the expenditure is being calculated an allowance should be made for these, so that they can be easily met as they occur.

The matter of ventilation is almost as important as that of sanitation, and care should be taken to see that this is in proper order before going into a house or apartment.

It is obvious that, if all painting and repairs that are necessary are done before the removal, a great deal of confusion and inconvenience is avoided; and sometimes it is a good plan to have the carpets put down before the furniture is moved in, although, if the day is wet on which the change of homes is made, this will be a disadvantage.

A good firm should be employed to do the moving, as this will be cheapest in the end. The furniture will be more carefully packed, and many breakages avoided. When the estimate is being made let every room be seen, so that it may be quite inclusive, and the cost of this part of the removal will at least be known.

Wardrobes should be emptied of their contents and soft coverings used to protect such articles as the piano, picture frames and handsome bed posts. It is not necessary to empty bureaus that lock, as the contents can be covered with sheets of paper tucked in well at the sides.

The boxes in which the china and glass are to be packed should be well lined with straw, and if each single piece of crockery is wrapped round with paper many breakages and cracks will be prevented, and any space that is left should be filled with straw or paper between and at the sides.

Books need careful packing, and should be put in boxes well lined with paper of several thicknesses, and handsomely bound volumes should be wrapped round with paper to prevent them being marked in any way. A rather good plan when packing books is to mark the cases according to the shelves to which they belong, and much confusion and time are saved when they are unpacked at the other end, ready to be put straight into their places.

A pretty general mistake when preparations for moving are in hand is that of having china and ornaments washed before being packed. This is a distinct waste of time, for they only have to be done all over again as soon as they are unpacked.

To insure the safe removal of oil paintings they should be put in boxes, but other pictures will be pretty safe if they are packed so that two face each other, and cotton wool is placed between the corners so as to avoid scratches.

A great deal of trouble will be saved if the contents of each box is marked plainly on the outside, so that on arrival they can be carried direct to the room for which they are required.

Moving is often looked forward to with dread because of the work which is entailed, but with careful management much of this can be avoided.

HOLD FAIR FOR SCHOOL FUND

Two little girls of Brookline to-day show what children can do for the schoolhouse fund by a little thought and work and at the same time have a lot of fun for themselves and their chums.

The girls are Erma Longfellow of No. 44 Fuller street and Agatha Kendall of No. 122 Pleasant street. They brought the Schoolhouse Editor an envelope containing a $5 bill and pennies nickels and dimes enough to make a total of $9.35. They made it all by a fair which they gave at Agatha Kendall's home. They planned it all themselves, invited all their friends and sold candy and fancy articles.

The first day it rained and they were disappointed by not making much money, but the second day was clear and nice and their little friends bought the pretty things on their tables and ate the candy until they found they had made the $9.35, which they brought to the AMERICAN.

Weren't they pleased and didn't all the children have a good time? TRY IT YOURSELF AND SEE. A good many bricks for that schoolhouse which the San Francisco children need so badly can be bought with $9.35.

To-morrow the AMERICAN will print these little girls' pictures and show you what bright young misses they are.

The Real Life of a Newspaper IS IN THE NEWS

That Is a Fact for Editors to Remember. Goethe Knew It

Here is an extract from Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister." It is published for the enlightenment of editors and of readers. It will seem strange to many that so sound an interpretation of modern "news value" should have been written more than three-quarters of a century ago;

"Ask yourself, or ask others, what invests a piece of news with its greatest charm. Not its importance, not its influence, but its mere novelty. Nothing old is cared for; novelty by itself excites our surprise, awakens the imagination, gently agitates the feelings and requires no exertion of the reasoning powers. Every man can take the most lively interest in a piece of NEWS with the least trouble to himself. Indeed, since a succession of news events carries us rapidly from one circumstance to another, nothing is more welcome to the generality of mankind than this inducement to constant diversion."

This will interest and explain something to those of us that have wondered at the persistent reading of newspapers in this country.

In the cars each long seat is a row of newspapers. We naturally think of the travelling human being as a mechanism for holding a newspaper in front of it by the hour.

Breakfast—AND THE LATEST NEWSPAPER.

Luncheon—and the latest newspaper.

Home on the cars or boat—and the latest newspaper. So it goes—with magazines, scientific periodicals, etc., scattered in between.

There are some ready to believe that the wide reading of newspapers is a bad sign. That is folly. Newspaper reading—as Goethe foresaw it—MEANS THE CRAVING OF THE MIND FOR WHAT IS NEW.

And Goethe, with his clear view and simple statement, would have made a good newspaper man.

Reporters, editors, wise newspaper owners, take to heart this wise expounding by Goethe:

"IT IS THE MERE NOVELTY OF NEWS THAT GIVES IT CHARM."

The late Amos Cummings, a real newspaper man, put it simply. Said he to the young reporter:

"Look out for NEW things. If a dog bites a man, that is old and worth little space. BUT IF A MAN BITES A DOG, that is real news. So look out for the man who bites the dog. The public will want to know all about him."

This newspaper devoted two full pages to Dr. Schenck's alleged discovery as to ways for controlling the sex of children. That was NEW. We knew all about children, or thought we did—and along came a man with a new idea. Said he, "Boys or girls to order." And the world wanted every line about that.

So it was when Roentgen discovered his method of making a picture of your skeleton while you wait.

The editors in our news department were quite wild in their eagerness to get a rat and photograph his interior apparatus. And when it became possible to outdo nature and get a complete photograph of Sarah Bernhardt's skeleton—that was bliss for the news men true to their profession.

Don't suppose that humanity's craving for the merely NEW is a wasted craving.

Nature—as you may learn from Fourier—NEVER GIVES US ANY ATTRACTION EXCEPT FOR OUR OWN GOOD.

Our minds watch for what is new as the cat watches for mice. And that constant watching gives us all our new discoveries. The old-fashioned, fagged-out, bored editor foolishly looks down upon his spry and keen "yellow" junior. He decries what he is pleased to call the yellow editor's emphatic treatment of merely exciting news.

But the yellow editor who shows you "an actual photograph of the box of poisoned candy" is living up to nature. Poisoned candy is NEW: the world wants to know about it.

And the editor who gives you the latest details of a "society" dinner, with the dyspeptic monkey for guest of honor, is doing what Goethe would have him do and what nature orders him to do.

Suppose some one said to you, "Come quickly, the mouse has CAUGHT THE CAT!" How you would jump, illustrating the yellow news instinct. A cat with a mouse—old, although always interesting. But a mouse catching a CAT—wonderful!

Don't be ashamed of the time you spend in news reading, if you read thoughtfully, for each piece of news opens up a new corner of your brain.

"The bear got drunk and killed its master." Unpleasant news, BUT a novelty, and it forces philosophic reflections.

"A new gorilla race discovered; individuals eight feet high." Good. Your mind roams all over creation, back to Darwin, down to the coast of Guinea—your mind is FORCED TO WORK.

"Roosevelt has decided to curb the railroads." Interesting.

"No, he changed his mind and the railroads curbed him." More interesting.

"Roosevelt says, 'Have ten babies.'" Very interesting.

"Roosevelt says the very rich do wicked things." Exciting.

"Roosevelt says he is disgusted with the 'muck rakers' that criticise the very rich that do wicked things." Splendid versatility; better than the house that Jack built.

Why do children play "Simon says thumbs up"? Because they like the unexpected.

For the same reason you read the evening paper, with its daily unfolding of strange events, and for the same reason you follow the mental windings of Theodore Roosevelt.

Newspaper men—paste up near your desks this Goethe clipping.

Little Editorials from the People

TO DO THE GREATEST GOOD

W. R. Hearst, Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am a constant reader of your valuable publication, the BOSTON AMERICAN, and conclude that the policy and purpose of all your publications are one and the same—to do the greatest good to the greatest number. Your object is certainly the noblest and best that man could conceive.

The manner in which you are educating the people and endeavoring to stamp out sin and crime demonstrate that you are succeeding in your mission. It is evident that you are playing upon many strings, using the best legitimate means within your knowledge to hasten the speedy accomplishment of your original purpose.

You are certainly a "hustler" and are doing the world the greatest service that any man could possibly render. May your enemies recognize in you their best friend. I have so thoroughly enjoyed your many splendid editorials that I wished to express my appreciation.

WHAT ARE PLAYGROUNDS FOR?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I wish to ask, through your paper, if the public grounds and parks of Boston are for the benefit of the public in general or for the use of a gang of toughs in particular. I received a permit for the use of a baseball diamond on the Columbus avenue playground for Saturday afternoon. I went there with the written permit, and the attendant was not to be found. A gang of toughs was playing on the diamond for which we had a permit. I asked them in a gentlemanly manner for the use of the field, showing them my permit, but was refused the field.

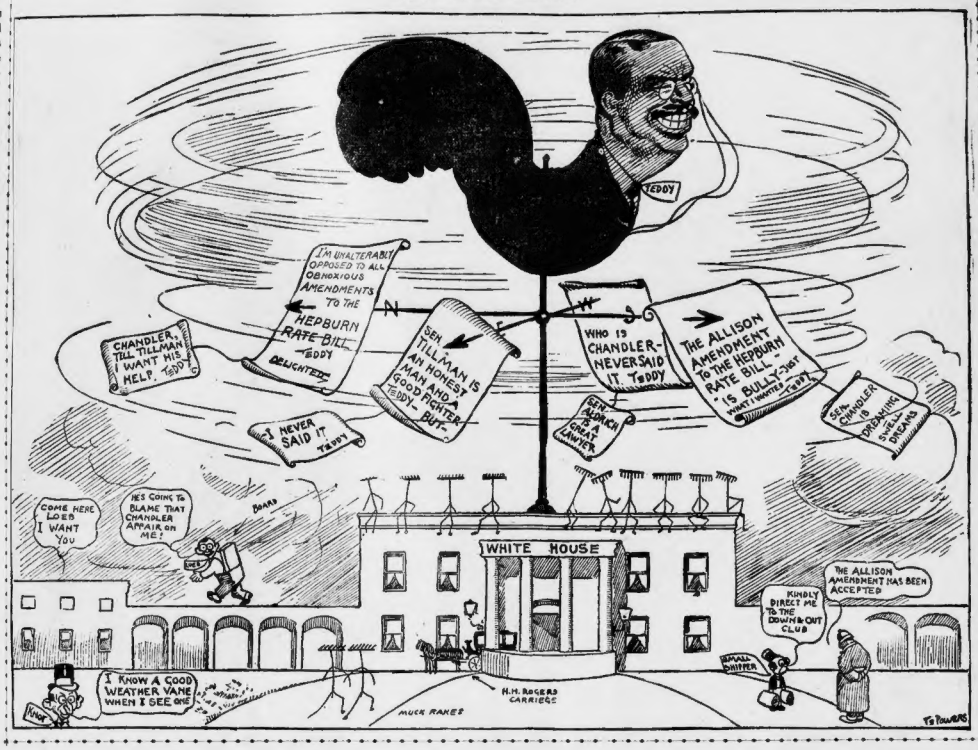

I went to a public pay station and phoned Station 10. The captain said he would send a policeman down at once. But the policeman failed to show up. Perhaps he fell asleep on the way down. If respectable citizens are not given the preference with the toughs of the city they, at least, should have fair play. It's up to the commissioners of public playgrounds and the policemen to see that they get it.

Does the Hat Make the Man?

By Rev. Albert E. George

DOES a plug hat create a special impression? Does it give an ordinary man an extraordinary individuality?

A few clergymen in Boston the other day made the test They were invited to a public reception. Two wore the plug hat, and two wore the derby.

Those who donned the plug had everything give way to them. A particular respect met them everywhere.

On the street, they felt it. When they arrived at their destination a certain amount of deference was shown them. The derbyites took in the situation at every glance.

They were always in the background, they saw it, and even at the threshold of the reception little things indicated they were only numbes two.

There was evidently something about the plug that conquered everything. In the corridors of the hotel it was in evidence. Bell boys sprung from their exclusive corner as if the catch would be a profitable one. Clerks put on their best behaviour, and the whole atmosphere was surcharged with attraction.

When the derbyites came along, there was perfunctory service. There was no intention in this, but it was noticeable and instinctively every one felt the influence of the plug and the tameness of the derby.

An exchange between these individuals was agreed upon at the latest reception. The derbyites wore the plug and pass their head gear to the other two.

They soon began to enjoy the distinction. They were no longer playing the second fiddle. They marked the advance over the conventional derby. Their experience tallied with the marked respect they had before noticed accorded their other companions.

What's in a hat?

Well, now, there is a great deal in a hat.

The stove pipe is a great vanquisher, and a great deal better than its name.

A man cannot be thoroughly dressed till he gets a plug. In the British Parliament it cuts an important figure, so important that members are nervous till they own two, or perhaps three.

Wherever you go this type of hat knocks all the objectionable features out of the man who wears it. You respect the hat long before you think about the wearer. It is truly wonderful what an influence follows it.

Youth is not rich in time; it may be poor;
Part with it as with money, sparing; pay
No moment but in purchase of its worth;
And what it's worth, ask deathbeds; they can tell.

The Inventor of Lying

By James J. Montague

WHEN small boys have been in a swimming, and their mammas ask about
The damming fact that they have got their shirts on inside out,

They're not to blame because they say with easy insolence
They got their garments turned that way in climbing through a fence;
For Mr. Ananias, back in ages dark and dim,
Invented fabrication, so we'll put it up to him.

WHEN Colonel Tody Hamilton's alliterative art
Arrays alluring adjectives through countryside and mart,
Describing things you never see, but full of hope you go

To witness all the wonders of the one and only show,
Pray do not blame the Colonel, he'd be still a truthful gent
If Mr. Ananias hadn't set that precedent.

AND when Presidents and Statesmen in addressing some dear brother
Use instead of names and titles phrases such as "You're another!"
Though the truth they may have juggled, who are we that we should blame
Men of majesty and power and of mighty name and fame?

Let them fib, if so it please them; for that evil and accursed
Ancient liar Ananias, he's the man who did it first.
